THE WAR.

The Sultan Proclaims Arabi Pasha a Rebel.

The Feudatory States in India Volunteering for Egyptian Service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 10.—The Sultan's proclamation, declaring Arabi Pasha a rebel, has been issued. It also condemns the conduct of the military leaders as rebellious and criminal, and mentions the friendly relations of the Porte with England.

INDIAN VOLUNTEERS.

CALCUTTA, August 10.—Nepaul and many other feudatory states in India have volunteered to furnish contingents for the British army in Egypt.

The Morning Budget.

ALEXANDRIA, August 10.—The family of Gen. Stone arrived yesterday. When they left Cairo, on the 3d inst., everything was quiet.

CONSTNNTINOPLE, August 10.—Lord Dufferin had an interview with Said Pasha yesterday. The latter gave Dufferin satisfactory explanations respecting the delay which has occurred in settling the terms of the proclamation against Arabi Pasha and the terms of the military convention with England. He expressed the hope they would be ready today.

An aide-de-camp of the Khedive arrived with letters giving a detailed statement of the position of affairs in Egypt.

Dervisch Pasha, having completed his preparations for his departure, went to the palace on Tuesday and asked for orders before sailing for Egypt. The Sultan replied that certain arrangements had still to be made; he must wait for instructions. In some circles this reply is interpreted as meaning that Dervisch Pasha will not be entrusted with the command of Turkish forces in Egypt.

An irade has been signed authorizing the proclaiming of Arabi Pasha a rebel and the landing of the Turkish troops in Egypt. The text of the irade will be presented to the conference to-day.

The imperial proclamation announces clearly the intention of the Sultan to support the Khedive. The Turkish Foreign Minister informed Lord Dufferin of the intention of the Porte to dispatch the first detachment of troops for Egypt to-day. The detatchment consists of 6,000 men.

The transport Canadian sailed from Woolwich yesterday with 1,500 tons of railway plant for Egypt.

The Field of the Coming War.

From the London Standard.

Whoever takes up a map of Lower Egypt will be struck, on the first glance, by the peculiar appearance it presents. The name it has borne for ages, "The Delta of the Nile," suggests at once the Greek letter "Δ" (Delta), the shape of which it so closely resembles if you turn it south upwards with Cairo at the top or near the top of the figure, and this very look represents its characteristic in almost all respects. The Black Delta is marked out on either hand by the sandy waste which lies outside it, and from which it has been won by the fertilizing waters and mud of the great river to which it owes alike its existence, its chief topographical features and its wealth. It is the two arms of the Nile which have formed the sides of the triangle as they pass into the sea. Practically, the line running from Port Said by way of Ismailia to Suez, which marks the course of the canal, and constitutes for us the most important feature in the whole country, lies outside, though at one point it touches the extreme edge of this delta. The great river, however, to a large exient determines the value for us even of the canal; since, except with great difficulty and inconvenience, ships passing through it, as well as all the population along its banks, which is necessary to maintain commerce and facility of transit, and to keep the canal itself in proper order, depend for their supply of drinking water upon the "fresh water canal," which is drawn off from the Nile near Cairo, and, running down to Ismailia, follows thence nearly the same course as the salt canal to Suez.

Our interests in Egypt, and, therefore, our military duties and necessities there, turn almost wholly upon the defense of these two lines of water, and from the arrangements into which we appear to have entered it would seem that at least a portion of the military forces destined for Egypt will be required to guard the the Canal itself.

As often happens, we have found that, although we are most anxious merely to defend that which we already enjoy, we are obliged to strike aggressive blows, and that we have become engaged in a virtual attack upon Egyptian territory at quite the other side of the Delta, near its extreme westerly point at Alexandria. Here, too, the possession of the place, or at least its preservation from the horrors of water famine and consequent epidemics, depends on the water which is supplied from the Nile. The Mahmoudieh Canal, which is drawn from the Nile nearly opposite Fouah, yields at Alexandria the only fresh water which is available in large quantity. Since the supply from this source has been in the hands of a regular water company the old wells of Alexandria have been much neglected, and at the best the water that is to be obtained from them is brackish in quality. For our troops and for the fleet, no doubt, a sufficient supply may be obtained by condensers, but it would be impossible to leave the population of a great city without water. It is in every way important to us to encourage the peaceably disposed to settle down under our rule, both to establish, at least, the commencement of a reign of order, and to meet the fanaticism which Arabi has developed by false statements, in the only way it can be met by bringing home to large numbers of the people the contrast between our actual doings and Arabi's reports of them. As long, however, as Arabi commands the source of the Mahmoudieh Canal all this is impossible.

Still, necessary as it is to us to master the river, in order that we may be able to use it as an obedient servant, we shall have to fight with the river itself, under the direction of its present masters. Already it appears that Arabi is flooding the country along the front of his present position. Throughout almost any line of advance we can take—and they are not numerous—we shall be exposed to the same difficulty. The water does not rise very high over the fields when the irrigating canals are closed so as to regulate the supply, but it rises high enough to convert the country into a slippery, loose mud, presenting the greatest difficulties to movement, especially that of artillery. Intersected as the whole country is by canals, which are destined to convey the fertilizing waters and mud of the Nile to the fields of Egypt, the power against us which Arabi thus possesses is very considerable. He will be able to retard our marches, to force us to adopt particular lines of advance, at times to oblige us to move on a narrow front, whence only a very small number can bring their weapons to play, whilst his own troops, disposed in line before them, are able to concentrate a much more considerable fire upon the slippery passes. The Nile has already commenced its rise. At Cairo it rushes through a narrow pass, until, some fifteen miles north of the city, it splits into two great arms, one of which flows out at Damietta, towards the eastern bank of the Delta, the other towards Rosetta, at its western end. All the country between these branches and the cultivated land on the outer banks of the two arms towards the desert is divided into basins, so arranged as to permit the fertile mud brought down by the Nile to be distributed over them gradually and successfully. During the months of the inundation, which continues from June till October, there are many villages which can only communicate with one another by boats, and others which can only be reached by the embankments.

As great portions of the whole system are completely under control, so that the water can be directed almost at pleasure into different channels, it will be seen what difficulties a skilful defender of such a country can impose on an invader. Everything indicates that Arabi is fully alive to his advantages, and fully aware that he can cut off the water we need and utilize his supply against us. His position in this respect is much better than that of any former defender of Egypt, precisely because since the last hostile army —which was also an English one—entered Egypt in 1807, the system of canals and the general cultivation of the country has been so greatly improved.

What force of troops Arabi may be able to collect is most uncertain, and their value in the field cannot well be guessed. The greatest difficulties which our troops will have to encounter will no doubt arise from the impediments to their marches which will be presented by the nature of the country. In addition we may have to meet the fanaticism of a population which has been persuaded that we have committed intolerable atrocities upon their compatriots and co-religionists; that we shall murder them if they fall into our power; and that already the great Arabi has sunk our ships and been victorious against us.

The relations between Arabi and the Bedouins appear, at present to be uncertain. There have been rumors of their opposing him from loyalty to the Khedive, and again, subsequent rumors of Arabi having won them over. Whatever may be the case at present, unless history belies itself, we have every reason to expect that as soon as a hostile army sets foot on the shores of Egypt, Bedouin and Egyptian regulars will cordially unite against us. For it is well to remember that glorious as are the traditions of the English army with regard to Egypt, we have there also met with some of our most terrible disasters. Though in 1801-1802, the expedition under Sir Ralph Abercrombie turned the French out of Egypt, and the Indian expedition, under Sir David Baird, made a most successful march, first across the desert of Thebes and down the Nile through Upper Egypt, and then to the sea at Alexandria, again marching back across the desert of Suez; yet, 1807, we were obliged to retire with very severe loss from an attempt to take Rosetta. Nearly eight hundred men, who had expended all their ammunition, were obliged to lay down their arms, and were marched into Cairo through roads lined with the heads of the Englishmen who had fallen. In that case we had calculated on the support of the Mameluke Beys, who deserted us, and with our wonted error of despising our enemies, we had landed in the country with only five thousand men.

A TELEGRAPHER'S WRONGS.

W. A. Redfield Released From Custody by the Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10.—W. A. Redfield, a telegraph operator at Columbus Barracks, Ohio, has been put under arrest upon a charge of desertion and is awaiting trial by court-martial. Secretary Lincoln has received many petitions for his release and to-day issued an order releasing him from the army. The above order will, no doubt, create lively satisfaction among the gentlemen of the telegraphic fraternity throughout the country, as the facts leading to the arrest of Mr. Redfield were well known and universally condemned by operators everywhere. It is stated that an alleged "friend" of Redfield's, then an operator, but since dismissed, attempted to blackmail him and being unsuccessful represented him to a represented him to a recruiting officer, as a deserter. The officer, however, was not disposed to pay much attention to the charge, but the "friend" threatened to have the sergeant arrested if he did not take Redfield into custody, and as the sergeant thought there might be some foundation for the charge, Redfield having entered with an entire misapprehension of the duties he was to undertake, he was compelled to act, and the arrest and the subsequent charges followed. Gen. Eckert and other prominent officials of the Western Union have taken great interest in the case, and Lieut.-Gov. Richards, of Ohio, has been very active in efforts to procure Redfield's pardon.

The Indianapolis Board of Trade.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 10.—The new Indianapolis Board of Trade, with 1,000 members, was inaugurated to-day. In the absence of the president, Vice-President A. D. Lynch made the opening address. Prayer was then offered by Rev. J. R. Mitchell.

THE TOASTS.

"The Commercial Exchange; its inception," was responded to by L. C. Hopkins.

"The New Board of Trade," Hon. E. B. Martindale.

The Old Board of Trade," D. Blackmore.

"The Late Merchants' Exchange," J. A. Closser.

"The Mercantile Association," J. W. Hess.

"The Produce Exchange," Arthur Jordan.

"The State of Indiana," Judge Baldwin.

"The City of Indianapolis," Mayor Grubbs.

"The Statistics of Commerce," J. B. Conner.

The new Board of Trade is consolidated of the former Board of Trade, the Merchants' Exchange, the Mercantile Association and the Produce Exchange, and starts under the most favorable circumstances, with a fund of of $15,000 in the treasury. Congratulatory messages were received from the Boards of Trade and Exchanges at New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, Peoria and St. Louis.

Drowned.

CHICAGO, ILL., August 10.—J. C. Holm, the Dane who became notorious last week through having buried on the lake front several children, whom he was first charged with murdering, having been acquitted of the charge but fined for the irregular burial, became disgusted with Chicago ways and started down the south branch yesterday afternoon in a small skiff, with a son aged 14. Before going a great distance his frail boat upset, and both were drowned. His family are destitute.

Failed.

BELVIDERE, ILLS., August 10.—T. E. Munn, an extensive butter and cheese manufacturer, has failed, with liabilities upwards of $15,000; no assets.

THE KANSAS REPUBLICANS.

The Topeka Convention Declares for Prohibition and Female Suffrage.

St. John Renominated for Governor—The River and Harbor Vete Indorsed.

TOPEKA, KAS., August 10.—The Republican State Convention reconvened at 9:45 this morning. The Committee on Resolutions reported as follows:

THE PLATFORM.

We, the Republicans of the State of Kansas, in delegate convention assembled, affirming our faith in and our adherence to the principles of the Republican party, hereby express our confidence in our present National and State Administrations, and we pledge ourselves to their support and announce the following as our declaration of principles:

Resolved, That we declare ourselves unqualifiedly in favor of the prohibition of the manufacture and of the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and pledge ourselves to such additional legislation as shall secure the rigid enforcement of the constitutional provision upon this subject in all parts of the State.

Resolved, That we demand the enactment of such laws as will prevent unjust discrimination by the railroad companies and will provide for such freight and passenger tariffs as shall fully protect the interests of the public.

Resolved, That we request the next Legislature to submit such an amendment to the Constitution of the State as will secure to women the right of suffrage.

Resolved, That we request our delegation in Congress to secure such an amendment to the revenue laws as will prevent the issuing of receipts or stamps to sell intoxicating liquors to any persons other than those authorized so to do under State laws.

This last resolution was not offered as a part of the platform, but the convention inserted it in the report. These resolutions were discussed for some time. Two additional resolutions were added by the convention:

Resolved, That we are in favor of the strict and immediate enforcement of all laws now upon the statute books for the regulation of railways.

Resolved, That we ask of the Republican majority of the Congress of the United States to pass such laws as will compel the railways of this State to take patents for the lands granted them from the public domain, to the end that all property in this State shall pay its just proportion of the taxes levied to support the Government.

Col. Martin, of Atchison, offered an amendment to the woman suffrage plank to the effect that the question of voting be first submitted to the women of the State, which was voted down. The roll was called on the woman question and it was adopted. The following resolution was offered and adopted:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Kansas heartily indorse President Arthur's veto of the river and harbor bill and the action of the United Kansas delegation in sustaining that veto. Nominations were then in order. D. J. Brower was nominated for Associate Justice by acclamation. Hon. P. St. John and Solon O. Thatcher were placed in nomination. The roll call shows that Jno. P. St. John received 287 votes; Thatcher, 82; J. B. Johnson, 12; Jno. A. Martin, 2.

THE BIG LAND PURCHASE.

A London Company to Go Into Extensive Business in the West.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, August 10.—The extensive purchase of grazing land in the West by a syndicate of English and American capitalists is much talked of. The Cattle Ranche and Land Company (limited), of London, is the purchaser. Mr. Wm. Falconer, a London director of the company, has been sent over to inspect the wonderful Panhandle district, and the purchase is the result of his advice. The ranche belonged to Rufus Hatch & Co., of this city. It is in the Federal lands, south of Kansas and north of the Panhandle of Texas. It extends over a range of about 2,000 square miles, has all ranche equipments and is well situated for railroad facilities. Mr. Falconer states that the company have acquired the right to graze over about one and three-quarter million acres and already have over 30,000 cattle on the land. The capital stock of the company is £400,000, in 80,000 shares of the par value of £5 each. Of this £300,000 is in 60,000 preferred shares entitled to a cumulative dividend of 10 per cent per annum.

The trustees are the Marquis of Tweeddale and H. William Hoare, of London. The directors in America are Senator Jones of Nevada, John Clay, Jr., of Chicago, Jas B. Houston of New York, president of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and Rufus Hatch. The American directors will form a committee of the board, but the control remains in London. The entire business of the company passes through the hands of Rufus Hatch. The scheme is looked upon here as one of the greatest money-making enterprises ever attempted.

Indications.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10.—Tennessee and Ohio Valley, generally fair weather, north to west winds, stationary temperature, stationary or higher barometer in the eastern portion. Lower Lake Region, local rains, partly cloudy weather, southerly to westerly winds in the east portion, slight fall in temperature, stationary or slight rise in barometer. Upper Lake Region, generally fair weather, westerly to southerly winds, slight rise in temperature, followed in the west portion by falling barometer. Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys, fair weather, northerly winds shifting to east and north, stationary or slight rise in temperature, followed by falling barometer.

The Crops.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS., August 10.—The harvest has been begun in earnest and reports are all favorable, barring some damage by the chinch bugs to the late spring wheat and oats. Corn is progressing wonderfully and the situation is the best known for years. The loss by last week's storms is trifling.

THE CANADA CROPS.

MONTREAL, August 10.—Crop reports, gathered from about one hundred and twenty places in Onatrio and Quebec, show that fall wheat is proving one of the best crops on record, and spring rather more than average. Hay is a fair average. Barley rather over than under. Peas and oats heavy crops, and roots are promising well.

SOUTHERN WISCONSIN.

WATERTOWN, WIS., August 10.—The winter wheat crop just harvested is the finest ever raised here, and small damage occurred to that in shock. The barley crop is damaged considerably in quality. Rice escapes injury, though the oats is badly lodged. The best yield ever known is looked for. Spring wheat will turn out well. The benefit to corn will more than counterbalance the injury the rains have done to the other crops.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

The Record says: Corn is improved greatly in condition by rains, and other crops are comparatively little injured.

MINNESOTA.

ST. PAUL, August 10.—The past two days the weather has been irreproachable for harvesters. Cool, breezy and dry.

DAKOTA.

In Dakota the barley is harvested and mostly secured. Oats will soon be ready, and promises from fifty to sixty bushels to the acre. Wheat is filling finely, and some cutting will be done this week.

In Minnesota reports continue equally cheering, and there is no change from the previous estimate. Nothing has damaged the crops yet. The weather has been perfect.

The Saratoga Races.

SARATOGA, August 10.—First race, three-fourths mile. Little Phil first, Springfield second, Square Dance third. Time 1:16.

Second race, two miles, Boatman first, Apollo second, Carley B. third. Time, 3:34

Third race, one mile and a furlong, Ada Glenn first, Gen. Monroe second, Maggie Aver third. Time, 1:55¾.

Fourth race, one mile and a quarter, Bailey first, Annette second, Kitty Clark third. Time, 2:19.

RULED OFF THE TRACK.

The owners of Bonnie Castle and the jockey, Oliver, who rode him, have been ruled off this track for pulling the horse in the selling race yesterday.

A Pageant at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, KY., August 10.—On the 12th of September, the opening day of the fall meeting of the Louisville Fair Association will have a grand industrial street pageant in honor of the completion of three new railroad lines. The Chesapeake and Ohio, the Chesapeake, Ohio and Southern, and the St Louis Air Line railroads have just been completed, and Louisville business men are arranging to celebrate the event on a scale of great grandeur.

The Gold Certificates.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10.—Acting Secretary of the Treasury French received a telegram from Secretary Folger, who is in New York City, instructing him to hasten the issue of gold certificates in accordance with the provisions of section 12 of the National Banking Act, which directs the Secretary of the Treasury to receive deposits of gold coin in sums not less than twenty dollars, and to issue certificates therefor. Certificates will be ready for issue in a few days.

The Amalgamated Iron-Workers.

CHICAGO, August 10.—The Amalgamated Iron-workers' Association to-day elected the following officers: President, John Jarret; Secretary, Wm. Martin; Trustees, Samuel S. Wainwright, Wm. Weihe, Edward Rogers; Treasurer, George W. Perry. Adjourned to meet next year in Philadelphia.

A Baffled Thief.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PINCKNEYVILLE, ILL., Aug. 10.—The horse stolen from one of the members of the Horse Protection Society in this precinct was captured with the thief, last night, at Metropolis, Ill. The farmers are fully organized to clean out the thieves.

A Double Killing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, GA., August 10.—In Stewart county, last evening, Jim Cameron shot Walter Hill fatally. Hill chased Cameron to a swamp and stabbed him to the heart. Both were found dead in the mud.

Lynch Law.

ATLANTA, GA., August 10.—A negro accused of outraging a white girl was taken out of jail last night at Newman, Ga., and hung by a party of seventy-five men. He was tried by the crowd and confessed that he and another man had committed the deed.

A Deadly Duel.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., August 10.—Joe Williams and Clayton Farrell, at Fort Ogden, yesterday, fought a street duel with pistols. Both fell pierced with bullets and both died in an hour.

The Death Sentence.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MADISON, August 10.—Yesterday the death warrant was read to William Bryant, the murderer of Moore, and he was sentenced to be hanged August 25.

Boy Murderers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, August 10.—In Camden county, yesterday, two boys forced a little boy into the river and held him there till he was drowned. The body was nearly devoured by alligators. The murderers fled.

The Telegraphers.

DENVER, COL., August 10.—The telegraph operators' strike is over, and all the operators are asking to be taken back at the old salaries.

A Wife Slayer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RICHMOND, VA., August 10.—In Bedford county Adam Wilkerson stabbed his wife to death for alleged infidelity.

The Star Route Trials.

WASHINGTON, August 10.—Kerr resumed the argument for the Government in the Star Route cases to-day.

The Humane Society.

The Humane Society officers have succeeded in keeping most of the diseased and galled horses in the stables of their owners, but occasionally their vigilance is rewarded. This morning Officer Walsh found A. Childs driving a galled horse on the Levee near Chouteau avenue and sent the animal home. It was owned by Thomas Shea, living on Fifth and Biddle.

Officer Holmes discovered a badly galled mule, which was in charge of Miss Angerberg, and ordered her to take it home at once. She lives in the Columbia bottom, 13 miles from the city.

ALL kinds of Meats, Fish and Game cooked to order at Milford's.

FOREIGN.

Fanatical Riots Against the Christians in Syria.

Trouble Among the Canada Lumbermen—Opening of a Mexican Railway.

England.

LONDON, August 10.—In consequence of the meeting of the Conservative Peers at Lord Salisbury's residence to-day there will be no division in the House of Lords to-night on the arrears bill as returned from the House of Commons. Salisbury adhered to his original view regarding the Lords' amendments to the bill, but he was overruled by a large majority of those present.

FUNKED.

LONDON, August 10.—The Amateur Rowing Association has declined the challenge of the Hillsdales.

THE LORDS REJECT.

In the Lords rejection of the first amendment of Salisbury to the arrears bill was acquiesced in without division.

THE PORTE'S PROCLAMATION.

In the Commons the Under Foreign Secretary stated that the Porte had submitted to the English Government the draft of a proclamation supporting the authority of the Khedive and denouncing Arabi Pasha by name.

Canada.

OTTAWA, August 10.—The lumbermen in the Ottawa District are excited over new regulations governing the importation of Canadian lumber into the United States. It appears that the lumber which has been imported as one-inch boards are really an inch and a quarter thick, and the United States Government having discovered this, issued an order which caused temporary suspension of the lumber business.

Syria.

CYPRUS, August 10.—A great anti-Christian demonstration occurred at the funeral in Beyrout of a Moslem who was found murdered and who was reported killed by Christians. The police sympathized with the mob. Many Christians fled to the mountains. A score of others were arrested, but only one was killed. Further disturbances are feared.

Mexico.

NEW YORK, August 10.—A dispatch to Gen. Palmer from the City of Mexico says the Government approved the Toluca division of the Mexican Natural railway extending from the City of Mexico to Toluca, and the road thus far is opened to public traffic.

France.

PARIS, August 10.—Herisson, Deputy, accepted the portfolio of the Minister of Public Works.

THE BRETHREN OF THE WHEEL.

The Bicyclists of Chicago Waxing Numerous and Influential.

Mr. Richard Garvey, the president of the Missouri Bicycle Club, returned this morning after a very pleasant trip to Chicago. He reports a very interesting trip and is in a high state of enthusiasm about the bicyclists of Chicago, who number in all, including those attached to clubs and those unattached, about 700. There are at present three clubs in Chicago, of which the Chicago is the largest; the Ariel comes next, consisting of about sixty members, and the smallest is the Hercules, which is composed exclusively of boys under eighteen years. This club contains several wheels which are the finest in the city. A club, to be called the Illinois Bicycle Club, now being organized, bids fair to develop into the largest institution of the kind in the city. It will be a sort of novelty in its way, as none but experts who have an established record will be accepted as members. He also states that unattached riders out-number the club members two to one, many of them being old men 60 years of age who ride simply for business purposes, and to save car-fare. The Chicago bicyclists have a substantial advantage over St. Louisans in their well paved and cleanly kept streets, which would be curiosities in the eyes of a St. Louis rider. He says the majority of the unattached riders are clerks who, like the old men, used them for business purposes. There are six 60-inch wheels in Chicago, while St. Louis possesses but one.

A St. Louisan Killed.

This morning the Chief of Police received a letter from the City Marshal of Jefferson, Wisconsin, stating that a man named Charles C. Winter had been killed on the 4th inst., by a train on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad at that place. Two St. Louis addresses were found on his body: one No. 2816 Washington avenue and the other corner of Olive and Thirteenth street. He has a mother and two sisters living here and it is presumed that one of the localities named is their home.

A Mule's Work.

At 7 o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Lucy Beatty, colored, with her two children, was driving a mule attached to a dump cart along Grand avenue. Just after passing the Wabash railroad track the mule became frightened and ran away. The three occupants were thrown out and badly bruised, the wheels passing over the woman. One of the children was so badly hurt that it is thought she may not recover. They were taken to their home, on Theresa street, south of Chouteau avenue, and a doctor called.

A Rinkelville Row.

Mrs. Artemus Sutton resides on Clara avenue, in Rinkelville, and has acquired a reputation as a sharpshooter, to which several of her neighbors will testify. Mrs. Sutton owns a piece of unimproved property, which is causing much trouble in the neighborhood and has resulted in a couple of lawsuits, the attempted assassination of M. Duffy and Samuel Ward and the threatened assassination of several others. Mr. Duffy owns several cattle, possessed of an inordinate desire to eat the grass on Mrs. Sutton's unimproved lot, despite that lady's protestations and threatened vengeance. Last week the cattle were in charge of Mr. Ward, when one of them strayed on Mrs. Sutton's premises. That lady appeared at the door, drew a large navy revolver from the folds of her dress and pointed it at Mr. Ward, but that gentleman disappeared behind a friendly tree. The aim was shifted, the revolver brought to bear on the cow, and when the trigger was pulled the bullet entered one of the hind-legs of the cow. The circumstance was reported to Mr. Duffy, and next morning he visited the Sutton domicile to ascertain the cause of her trying to kill his cattle. The information was imparted and sorrow expressed that Mr. Duffy was not the target instead of the cow, but hope expressed he would be on hand when the next shot was fired, which would be very soon, unless he left her premises in a very short time. Duffy left, but advised Mrs. Sutton to take good aim when she undertook to shoot him, as he was a little on the shoot himself. That evening he was arrested for threatening to take the life of Mrs. Sutton and bound over to keep the peace. Mr. Ward then swore out a warrant against Mrs. Sutton for threatening to shoot him. Constable Frese served the warrant and yesterday the case was tried before 'Squire Eberhard. Mrs. Sutton was bound over to keep the peace and assessed costs, amounting to nearly $60.

ADJOURNED FOR THE TERM.

The Mill Under the Dome Suspended Till October—Last Sitting.

There was quite a rush of attorneys to the Circuit Court this morning, Judge Thayer, of Room No. 5, having announced that the court would be adjourned for the term today. He expects to remain in town, however, throughout the vacation and cases of urgency can be presented in chambers. The business before the court this morning included disposition of odds and ends of litigation, allowance of attorneys' fees, assignees' reports, etc. The attendance of the bar was very large for this season of the year. Very few attorneys have left town, the cool weather and the approaching excitement of a campaign in which they are directly interested serving to hold them to their legal haunts. The past winter was not a profitable one for lawyers generally, and few were in a condition to make extended trips abroad. Younger men complain that the bar is too crowded to admit of lucrative practice, and the paying business falls into the hands of a few select, old-established firms. The prospects for the coming winter are, however, improved. There is a steady increase of new litigation, and the record of new cases for trial in the Circuit Court already borders on four hundred. Several new firms composed of young and promising barristers have shown to the front with new fillngs within the past few weeks, an indication that confidence is somewhat restored in the path of litigation and the field of local practice.

Crumbs of the Courts.

In the suit of Frank vs. Crawford, the court to-day allowed Eber Peacock, attorney, a fee of $325.

Letters of administration were granted today to Balthazer Weber, administrator of Christian W. Schlosmann.

In the matter of the Sicilian lemon firm squabble. Franchino vs. Giseone, the court ordered to-day a sale of the remaining assets.

An order of court issued to-day reconveying the property in the matter of the assignment of Ludwig B. Suzee. A settlement has been effected with the creditors.

Judgment by confession for $6 390 was entered to-day in court in the suit of the Geo. A. Rubelmann Hardware Company against the St. Louis Furniture Company.

The Julia Building Association's suit against the Bell Telephone Company relative to the sidewalk pole controversy was appealed this morning from the Circuit Court.

Increase of Letter-Postage.

A fair idea of the steady increase of business in this city may be gathered from the post-office returns of letters mailed the first seven days of August for three years past, viz.: 1880, 5,345 pounds weight; 1881, 6,080 pounds; 1882, 6,894 pounds.

Opening of Easton Avenue.

The Federal Government Removes a Convict From the Prison.

M. E. Rodgers Details the Tortures, Brutalities and Extortions of the Guards.

A Disgraceful Story Indorsed by the Action of the United States Authorities.

C. C. Allen, U. S. Marshal for the Western District of Missouri, arrived from Jefferson City this morning, accompanied by his chief deputy, George G. Lohman. The Marshal has in charge a Federal prisoner named M. E. Rodgers, a postal clerk who was convicted of robbing the mails at Topeka Kas., and sentenced to the penitentiary for five years. He was confined at Jefferson City, where he has served two years and nearly seven months. Recently the United States authorities have discovered that Rodgers was being treated in an inhuman manner. As a consequence he was ordered transferred to the Penitentiary at Chester, Ill. The order of transfer states that the reason for removal is "on account of ill-treatment in the Missouri Penitentiary." Rodgers was taken to the Jail, where a POST-DISPATCH reporter, hearing of the case, called to see him. The prisoner is a young and intelligent-looking man, but seems terribly broken in health, which he ascribes to the treatment he received at the Penitentiary, which, as he says, "is sufficient to kill any man." Asked about the particulars of his case, he said:

"It would take me a day to give you an idea of how these fellows act towards the convicts. In my own case the facts were these. The food is always wretched, and it is as much as a hungry man can do to eat it. Some months ago, I went to the dinner table, and the knife laid at my plate was full of refuse and was really disgusting. I knew nothing about the rules of the place, but the custom was, when a knife was dirty in that way, to hold it up so the guard could see it and he would have it changed. I held up my knife and the guard came and took it away, bringing me another. The next evening at supper the spoon furnished me was even more disgusting in condition, being covered with refuse and filth. I held it up, as usual, to have it removed, when the guard came up to me and said:

"You go to the blind cell, you do."

"But this spoon is not fit for a man to use," said I.

"You go to the blind cell," said the guard.

"But I cannot eat with such a thing as this."

"You go to the black cell," said he; and I went.

"Who was the guard?" asked the reporter.

"His name was Hackney. They called him Gen. Hackney. The rule was that you had to give a guard ten cents or a quarter a week, and he saw that you got clean utensils to eat with. I did not do this, not because I had not the money, but because I would not submit to this petty extortion. So they had it in for me. They marched me off to the blind cell and kept me there an hour. Then they took me out and brought me 'between the gates.'"

"Where is that?" asked the reporter.

"It is a place near the main gates where the flogging is done. That's where they take men at night to flog them. Well, they took me out there, and when I got in I found Deputy Warden Bradbury and Deputy Todd there. They took off my shirt, and without a word they flogged me severely on the bare back. The only charge against me was that I had held up a very dirty spoon to get it changed, and that I would not pay the bribe necessary to secure the change. They sent me back to my cell with my back lacerated and bleeding. I was indignant of course. I sat down and wrote a letter to United States Marshal Allen, stating the case to him. Then Bradbury sent for me and asked me what was in the letter. I told him that it was very important to me, and he had to send it to Mr. Allen. The latter came to see me, and after I had made my statement to him, we consulted with Bradbury and said that he would report the case to the Department of Justice at Washington. He did so, and Mr. Haight was sent out from Washington to investigate the case. I showed my lacerated back to Mr. Allen, and he was satisfied that I had been badly treated. Haight gave me my choice of being removed to Illinois or Detroit. I selected the latter, and when he came back on the 13th of June, I told him that I was anxious to be removed, inasmuch as they had it in for me, and anybody who stood up for his rights had no show with them. So Mr. Allen brought me down here this morning. There was some trouble about catching the train and I told Mr. Allen that I would walk to Chester rather than go back to that place."

"Is the treatment really so cruel in many cases?"

"It is so bad that you would not believe it if I could tell you all. While I was in the Penitentiary I read in the POST-DISPATCH the account of the killing of Guy Stanton in the Penitentiary last January. That was nothing but a murder. There was a rumor that an outbreak was to occur in the Penitentiary. A convict stated that Stanton was one of the leaders. I know and everybody knew that he had nothing to do with it at all. Nevertheless they took him and gave him 'seventy-five'—lashes, I mean. His back was most horribly mangled and torn. When they began to suspect his connection with the outbreak they put him in the blind cell, which did not contain a single article of furniture. He stayed there, without food or water, for two days. He had frequently said that he would rather be killed than flogged again. In some way he got a knife in the dark cell. On the third day the guards went down and asked him to come out. Stanton replied that he would rather be dead than be flogged again. Then the guards went in and heated big iron poles, which they use on such occasions. They brought these things in, one at a time, red hot, and plunged them at him through the bars of his cell. I was in the cell just over him and you could hear him roar all over the cell house. When one iron was cool they brought in another red hot one and punched them at him, burning him horribly all over his body. He roared and begged for mercy, but they kept up this searing process for more than half an hour. Then in some way Stanton's throat was cut. They took him away to the dead-house, washed him up, covered his numerous burns, a doctor looked him over, and that was all that was said."

"Did not an investigating committee from the Legislature visit the Penitentiary last winter?"

"Yes, but that was a cut-and-dried affair. Bradbury and Todd selected the men to go before the committee, and told them what to say before they went. One man, I think his name was Clarke, spoke his mind freely before the investigating committee, and that night they took him out 'between the gates' and flogged him to their hearts' content. They gave him thirty, I believe. Two men out of our shop, shoe shop No. 6, were allowed to testify. One of them was Wm. Wicker, a horse thief, in for fifteen years. He had $200 in Willis' hands at the time the committee was there and the Warden was going to get him a pardon. That is why he testified the way he did. Willis got him a lawyer named Mansur, but the pardon did not come. They charged him $100 for legal services all the same and collected it out of his money. He would not testify that way now, I think. The other man from our shop was Jack Wilson, the shop cleaner. Any of us men that had real grievances to tell would not be permitted to go before the committee. Only men that were fixed were allowed that privilege."

"What is the sanitary condition of the prison?"

"Horrible; too bad to describe. Where I was there were only ten ordinary bath-buckets for 150 men to wash in. If you got a chance, all right. If you did not, all right too."

"What food did they give you?"

"Very little and very bad. You hear very often of the Penitentiary farm across the run from the "Pen." Forty convicts are generally employ there. They raise all kinds of vegetables. Well, we never get any of that. All we get is potatoes. They buy them, and they are generally so rotten that we could not eat the hash. Convicts who work on the farm state freely that they bring most of the choice produce of the farm either to the Governor's mansion or to the houses of Warden Willis or Deputy Warden Bradbury. I know we never get any of it at all. Then the hospital is a bar-room for Bradbury and Todd and the guards. They drink whisky there all the time and charge it up to hospital supplies. They have a nice time, and so do we, in a different way, though."

"The guards are not models of suavity, are they?"

"No. This fellow 'Gen.' Hackney, that got me whipped, was all right if you would 'tip' him generously. Last winter he had the convicts chip in and buy him an overcoat. Soon after he went out on a drunk, got his hands and toes frozen, and had to be discharged."

Rodgers had a dozen other things to tell about, but he was in a hurry to eat his dinner. He left on the 3 o'clock train for Chester, accompanied by Lohman. Of course this is only a convict's story, but Rodgers is an intelligent young man, and if his story is true, it certainly reflects very strongly on the management of the "Pen" under Willis, Bradbury and the rest of them.

THE HICKMAN HEROINE.

Miss Nellie Coffee Details the Loss of the Gold Dust.

An Interview With the Ministering Angel of the Catastrophe.

The City of Alton, with its cargo of dead and injured, taken from the unfortunate Gold Dust, arrived at the wharf last evening a cordon of police kept back the curious crowd while the injured were removed in the city ambulances which were in waiting on the Levee. Capt. McCord, of the Gold Dust, was seen shortly after his arrival. At the time of the explosion he was in his cabin and was rendered unconscious by the shock. He was carried in this state to the hotel. He knew nothing of the dreadful scene that followed.

MISS NELLIE COFFEE,

the heroine of the disaster, was seen this morning at her residence, 3217 Kittenreiner avenue. When the reporter entered the whole family where in the parlor, where Dr. Robert J. Hill was dressing the scalded hands of Mr. James Coffee, Miss Coffee's brother, a victim of the disaster.

Miss Coffee is as modest as she is brave, and she was very loth to talk about the matter for publication. On the way up she has been the constant nurse of the wounded, never resting one moment, day or night, when her services were required. She received quite an ovation on her arrival at the wharf yesterday. She and her brother were on a visit to a sister in the South and were returning on the ill-fated Gold Dust.

Miss Coffee said: "I was in my state room when I heard the noise. I knew what had happened. I made my toilet as quickly as I could. Papa says I did not forget to look in the glass, but I did, because the mirror was broken to pieces in the shock. Then I came out and the sight was terrible. The cabin was strewn with corpses and people mangled in every way. They were groaning and crying for water, but there was none to give them. The first thing I did was to look towards my brother's state-room, No. 11. I saw at once that that part of the boat was gone. It had sunk down into the wreck. I was horrified. I looked around for Jimmie, but I could find him nowhere. The stairs all gone, so that I could not get down in that way. Then men took me and handed me over the decks, from one down to the other. That was the only way we could be taken out. All the time there was a large crowd on the bank at Hickman, and they were shouting "drop her in the river, that's the only way to save her."

"Were you frightened?"

"I do not know. I was principally anxious about my brother. They gave me credit for great presence of mind, but I know nothing about that. They also say that I walked across the red hot furnace. Boards were laid across that place, and it was the only way of getting to the side of the boat on the lower deck. When I got into the skiff I heard terrible cries, and somebody said there were people under the wheel. I was in agony, and was sure it was James. As I approached the land, I saw him then for the first time, waving his poor, burnt hands to me, and then I was happier than ever I was in my life."

"And the scenes on the way up?"

"Oh, don't recall them. I never want to remember them or to see them again. They were terrible.

Notes.

Capt. Lem Gray, who was so severely injured by the Gold Dust explosion, was doing well to-day.

Sol. Price, the injured mate of the Gold Dust, was doing as well as could be expected to-day. His back is pretty badly scalded, but he will recover.

The Decision of the Directors Upon the June Wheat Case.

A Corner in Corn Threatened—A New Board of Trade—Notes.

The committee of seven from the Board of Directors that has been engaged in the rehearing of the June wheat deal testimony, and who have been wrestling with the subject for several days past, met in the Directors' room this morning at 9 o'clock. It was learned that they had finally agreed upon a price, and they only met this morning to draw up a report and submit it to the Exchange, but it was near 11 o'clock before they adjourned. On the floor the report was looked forward to with great eagerness. Most of the members were of the opinion that the price would be fixed at over $1 20, some placing it at $1 25, but the majority agreeing upon $1 24¼, which they based upon $1 18½ with five per cent damages added. At about 11 o'clock the committee filed out of the room and Mr. Frank Gaiennie, with paper in his hand, mounted the rostrum and wrapped the Exchange to order. The members gathered in front of the speaker's stand and Mr. Gaiennie read the following report.

AWARD.

"In the matter of the appeal of E. M. Switzer, in the case of E M. Switzer vs. S. W. Cobb, the Board of Directors find that the average market value of No. 2 red winter wheat in this market on June 30, 1882, last, was one dollar and eighteen and a half cents ($1 18½) per bushel, and, it not appearing from the evidence that said S. W. Cobb did use all reasonable efforts to fill his contract, they add five per cent penalty to the market price for non-fulfillment of the contract. The Board of Directors find that under the above decision the price of No. 2 red winter wheat for the settlement of the contracts therein mentioned is one dollar twenty-four 42½-100 cents per bushel and that they award that the said E. M. Switzer has no claim upon S. W. Cobb for the non-delivery of said five bushels No. 2 red winter wheat in question."

At the announcement of $1 18½ the crowd broke into loud cheers, and the award of five per cent damages brought out more applause. The members then dispersed, but gathered in groups on the floor to discuss the decision. It seemed to be the general sentiment that the directors had done well, and there was no grumbling heard from any one. The committee that first tried the case and awarded $1 18½ as the settling price felt satisfied, as the directors had fixed upon the same price, and it was only a difference of opinion between the committee and the directors as to whether the long had been damaged by the shorts failing to fill their contracts. The committee thought he had not been and the directors were of the opinion he had been damaged. The secretary's record for last evening's session, when a decision was arrived at, shows that when the committee met a motion was made by C. S. Freeborn and seconded by S. A. Bemis that the committee affirm the decision of the Arbitration Committee, placing the settling prices at $1 18½. This motion was lost. Capt. J. P. Keiser then moved and C. W. Barstow seconded that the price be fixed at $1 18½ with 5 per cent damages added. Mr. McEnnis amended this by making the price $1 32½ with 5 per cent damages added. The amendment was lost, and on a vote taken on Capt. Keiser's motion Capt. Keiser voted yes, C. W. Bristow yes, S. A. Bemis no, M. McEnnis no, C. S. Freeborn no, G. M. Flanagan yes, Frank Gaiennie yes. It is thought this decision will settle this wearisome June wheat deal. Mr. J. B. Oliver was seen, and, though he would not express himself, it is said he will accept the decision. The shorts are not satisfied with the decision of the directors, as they claim there was nothing in the evidence that showed the shorts did not use due diligence in attempting to fill their contracts, and that the longs did not attempt to prove this fact. Therefore they claim that the directors did wrong in adding the five per cent damages. It is understood the shorts will lay before the Board of Directors the agreement signed by Mr. Oliver's brokers and the shorts, wherein both sides agreed to abide by the decision of the first committee, no matter what price should be fixed upon by this committee. The shorts at the same time will ask the directors whether their decision applies to all outstanding contracts for June wheat, or to the Switzer-Cobb case alone. If the directors say their decision covers all outstanding contracts the shorts will possibly make a stand upon the agreement and claim they cannot be forced to accept the last decision. So probably the June case is not disposed of yet.

A CHICAGO CORN CORNER.

Some warning notes have been thrown out about corn, and parties who are short the near-by months have been advised to skin out as quick as they can. Well posted parties in Chicago report deals in corn, including August, through September and October. Some Chicago brokers are refusing to sell August short, as they fear a "corner." Wall street, with Rufus Hatch at the head, is said to be bulling the corn market, having most of the contracts for three months in their hands. This is particularly the case with August, which is said to be hard and fast in their clutches. In St. Louis the shortage for this month is said to be considerable, but no fear is entertained of a squeeze, though if Chicago advances there will undoubtedly be higher prices here. The same will probably be the case with the two following options, though the lines out for September and October are not large. November is heavily oversold here and trading in the year has been heavy enough to lead some to suppose that a large number of contracts are out. This is probably so, but these contracts are scattered around so that there is no one firm that is "long" or "short" to any great amount. Chicago and the Northwest have been the principal buyers of the year option, and the South, especially Texas, Tennessee and Kentucky, the principal sellers.

INDIANAPOLIS BOARD OF TRADE.

The following telegram was received by President Slayback this morning:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 10, 1882.

President St. Louis Merchants' Exchange:

The new Indianapolis Board of Trade, with 1,000 members, inaugurated to-day, sends greeting to the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange.

A. D. LYNCH, Vice-President.

J. D. BLAKE, Sec.

In answer this was sent:

Indianapolis Board of Trade:

The St. Louis Merchants' Exchange, with its 3 600 members, extends its heartiest congratulations and best wishes to the Indianapolis Board of Trade. We are at your commands for any information you may desire. We send you by express a patent invigorator,

CHAS. E. SLAYBACK, President.

This "patent invigorator" was a large nursing bottle.

NOTES.

W. Hartwell Minor and David R. Francis went into a long-winded deal this morning, D. R. selling W. Hartwell "five" May corn at 65c. It is understood they will have the contracts for this trade framed and hung up in their office.

President Slayback is arranging for an indicator for the Call Board that will show what option or grade the caller is engaged in calling, and thus save him the trouble of keeping the operators posted. A new sounding board will also be placed at the caller's stand to take the place of the present one, which is no good at all.

THE IRON-WORKERS.

Strike at the Helmbacher Forge This Morning.

When the recent strike of the iron-workers in this city was concluded, nearly one hundred men belonging to the Amalgamated Association returned to their employment with the Helmbacher Forge and Rolling Mill Company, having signed the Cincinnati agreement. The puddlers, however, refused to resume their employment, and the company was forced to purchase muck iron from other cities in order to keep their mills running. This action, which was necessitated by reason of the puddlers' refusal to return to work, excited the ire of the Amalgamated men, who claimed that under their rules the muck iron must be made at the mill. Several days since the workmen held a meeting and sent a committee to the superintendent, who refused to recognize them in any capacity. Last night the committee paid a second visit to the superintendent, who again refused to be dictated to in regard to the management of the mill. The result was that this morning about thirty-five men engaged in the bar mills failed to show up. Thereupon the company printed a notice to the effect that all workmen belonging to the Helmbacher forge and rolling-mills, belonging to the Amalgamated Association, were dismissed, and that hereafter none but non-union men would be employed. This will throw out of employment about one hundred men. The printed circulars were posted at the mill this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The secretary stated this morning that the mill would secure enough non-union men at once to keep three hammers going, and no stoppage is anticipated.

A Lucky Baby.

From the New York Sun.

Sixteen years ago a baby eleven months old was found in a street in Boston, dressed in costly clothes and wearing a locket on which the name "Charles Willoughby" was engraved. The child was adopted by a restaurant keeper of Hartford, Conn., and christened Charles Rogers. He grew up in ignorance of his origin, and the clues furnished by the articles worn by him when he was found led to no further discoveries. Recently he became a waiter in the Lawton House at Stone Bridge, Rhode Island, and worked there several months. Then he suddenly received a message from a dying man at Providence, who proved to be his grandfather, and was informed that he had fallen heir to a large fortune. An unexplained mystery hangs about the history of the boy. It is said that his relatives have all along known of his whereabouts and doings, but for reasons not stated did not make themselves known to him until the occurrence that has suddenly placed him in possession of ample wealth.

THE MACHINE.

Meeting of the Democratic State Committee.

Mr. Lancaster and His Little Resolution —Political Notes.

The new Democratic State Central Committee met at 10 this morning in the private parlor of the Laclede Hotel. Considerable interest attached to this meeting, not only because of its newness, but because of the diversified interests represented on account of the formation of new Congressional districts. It has been a matter of private discussion for several weeks as to the necessity of electing new Congressional committees for the districts containing the city of St Louis, but nobody appeared to have any authority in the matter. While this hesitancy characterized the city, the country has moved promptly and elected new committees. Such questions as these are just now agitating the Democratic mind with peculiar force, and consequently the meeting of the State Central Committee was calculated to draw an unusually large crowd of statesmen. The appointment of the Executive Committee was likewise a matter of deep concern and added to the attendance of the politicians.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the chairman, Col. John O'Day, with Secretary Mayo, called the State Committee to order, and an executive session was declared. On a call of the roll the following members were found to be present:

First District, Dr. D. H. Shields, Marion county; Second, Henry A. Newman, Randolph county; Third, J. P. Thomas, Gentry county; Fourth, A. P. Morehouse, Nodaway county; Fifth, R. E. Cowan, Jackson county; Sixth, John S. Elliott, Cooper county; Seventh, D. A Ball, Pike county; eighth not represented; Ninth, R. D. Lancaster; Tenth, Jasper N. Burks, St. Francois county; Eleventh, Sam Mosby, Maries county; Twelfth, W. H. Phelps, proxy for D. P. Stratton; Thirteenth, John O'Day, Greene county; Fourteenth not represented.

Immediately after roll-call Chairman O'Day addressed the committee, calling attention to the fact that the Democracy was entering upon another State canvass and that the utmost discretion and harmony should characterize the committee in its work of conducting the campaign. There were few differences to be healed, but the labor should be performed with unanimity and to the best interests of the Democratic party.

At the conclusion of the chairman's brief address, a resolution was introduced and adopted declaring the following named gentlemen to be members of the Executive Committee for the ensuing two years: R. D. Lancaster, St. Louis, chairman; E. A. Noonan, St. Louis; Jasper N. Burks, St. Francois county; D. H. Shields, Marion county; Henry A. Newman, Randolph county; John O'Day, Green county, and D. A. Ball, Pike county.

At this juncture Mr. Lancaster arose, and, with his customary suavity, begged leave to introduce a resolution, which he presumed, would meet the prompt indorsement of the committeee. When the secretary read the resolution Mr. Lancaster found, to his astonishment, that it was not promptly indorsed, but after being liberally amended by D. H. Shields the little document read as follows:

Resolved, That this committee hereby approves and indorses the calls for nominating conventions in the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Districts, as already called, and that in the remaining districts this committee recognize the individual committeemen of the various counties and wards (now residing within the new districts) composing the Congressional committees of the old districts as constituting the Congressional committees of the new districts for the purpose of calling nominating conventions and fixing a basis of representation for the same.

In this shape, even, the resolution excited much discussion, but was finally adopted. To the uninitiated there is nothing particularly objectionable in the resolution, but it will be noticed that under it the State Committee indorses the new Congressional Committees all over the State, while in St. Louis it approves of the action of the individual committeemen of the committees organized under the old districts. The simple meaning of the movement is a continuation of the machine, and the resolution secures an indorsement of a body of men who have no existence whatever as Congressional Committees. There should have been an order for the election of new committees for the Congressional districts embracing the city of St Louis.

At 12 o'clock, the committee took a recess until 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, when they expect to arrange for the conduct of the coming campaign. The session will last through the remainder of the afternoon.

Political Points.

L. H. Murray, a prominent Democrat from Springfield, Mo., looked in at the committee this morning.

Wm. H. Phelps, candidate for Congress from the Carthage district, is in the city today as a proxy member of the State Central Committee.

W. E. Coleman, of Marshall, Saline county, the nominee for Superintendent of Public Schools, stood around the Laclede corridors to-day forming the acquaintance of "the machine." He is a stranger in the city.

F. P. Scott, chairman of the Laclede county Democratic committee, spent yesterday in the city, but was more anxious about the disposition of a train load of cattle than of politics. He said that R. P. Bland would be re-nominated and easily elected, and that Dr. John W. Armstrong would be nominated for the Legislature.

Geo. W. Early, attorney of the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad, registered to-day at the Southern. He says the State loses about $164,000 by reason of the falure of the Fund Commissioners to comply with the law concerning State bonds, particularly those of the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad, and the road is slightly ahead on McCreary's decision.

Hon. J. D. Wallace, United States Senator from Arkansas, Hons. Richard Coke, Waco, Tex.; Andrew J. Dorne, Austin, Tex.; D. B. Culbertson, Jefferson, Tex.; and C. Upson, San Antonio, Tex., returning members of Congress, registered to-day at the Planter's. They are particularly satisfied at the passage of the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill over the President's veto.

AMUSEMENTS.

PICKWICK THEATER.

The Criterion Comedy Company had a large audience at the Pickwick last night and gave a performance that attracted admiration and applause. The play selected was the familiar one of "Caste," in which the company appears to unusual advantage, each performer proving thoroughly competent. Miss Louise Sylvester is too well known to require any additional commendation, but her work this week at the Pickwick is establishing her more firmly than ever in public estimation. Forrest Robinson, last seen with James O'Neill, is an excellent actor, and deserves all the credit he receives. In brief, the entire company is entitled to consideration, and there is no doubt they will have a brilliant engagement here. "Caste" will be repeated to-night.

URIG'S CAVE.

"The Sorcerer" was presented last evening for the last time this week, at the Cave. To-night Ford's Opera Company will appear in their fine performance of "Patience;" to-morrow night they repeat "Manola;" on Saturday night, "Billee Taylor," and on Sunday evening next, "Merry War." This makes a splendid programme, and it will be appreciated.

LOCAL NOTES.

Ed. Zimmerman, formerly treasurer of Pope's, leaves the city next Saturday for New York, where he assumes the business management of Stetson's Fifth Avenue Theater.

Prof. Louis Ballenberg, leader of the Cincinnati Orchestra, arrived in the city this morning, and will observe the working of Richard Maddern's Band at the Pickwick to-night.

The Bridal Bulletin.

The following marriage licenses were granted this morning: James Hanlon and Mary McGaton, William Dunham and Susan Evans, Diedrich Brammann and Mathilda Fechner, Joseph Grote and Lina Lempert, John Thompson and Martha J. Davis, Barzella F. Chapman and Clara Grainger, Henry Bangert and Henrietta Denning.

SENDING A TELEGRAM.

An Inexperienced Railroad Traveler's Laborious Efforts.

From the Burlington (Iowa) Hawk-Eye.

One man reached a long arm over the little crowd clustered at the operator's window and asked for a "blank telegraphic form," explaining that he "wished to send a telegraphic dispatch to his family." Now, when a man speaks of a "telegraphic dispatch" I always wake up and look at him, because the cumbersome title is all at utter variance with the spirit of the telegraph. It's too long. The tone of it betrays the man who has little use for the telegraph. The more he uses the wire, the shorter his terms. The more nearly he can come to saying "msg" the more content he is. And he doesn't call it a "telegraphic form;" he asks for a "blank," black or red, as the case may be. And he never "telegraphs" anybody; he "wires" them. And he doesn't explain to the operator what he wants to do with the blank; presumably he wants to write a message. And as for the matters referred to in that "msg" and the party for whom it is intended, the operator will know all that he wishes to know—and sometimes much more than you want him to know—soon enough.

So I watched this passenger write his "telegraphic dispatch." First he asked the operator: "What day of the month is this?" There was nothing unusual in that. All men ask that. It is the opening line in the regular formula of sending a "msg." You may know what date it is before entering the office, you may even have it impressed upon your mind by having a note fall due upon that day, but the moment you poise your pencil over the blank that date flies from your mind like the toothache from a dentist's stairway. So when the man asked: "What day of the month is this?" I was not surprised. I courteously answered him, as a cover to approaching his position, but he did not believe me. He repeated his question and made the operator answer. Then I knew he was very new at it. He spoiled three blanks before he got a "telegraphical dispatch" written to suit him. But even that is not very uncommon. A man always uses stationery more extravagantly in another man's office than he does at home. Then he wrote every word in the body of the dispatch very carefully and distinctly, but scrambled hurriedly over the address as though everybody knew that as well as he did, and dashed off his own signature in a blind letter style, as though his name was as familiar to the operator as it was to his own family. But even this is not uncommon. A man will write "Cunningham" so that no expert under the skies will tell whether it was Covington or Carrington, or Cummagen, or Carrenton, and when the operator points to it and asks, "What is this?" the writer will stare at him in blank amazement for a moment, and then answer: "Why, that's my name?" "Well, yes, I know that," the operator will say; "but what is your name?" Then the man will gasp for breath and catch hold of the desk to keep himself from falling, and finally shout: "Why, Cunningham, of course!!!" and look pityingly upon the operator, and then glance about the room with a pained, shocked expression, as one who should say, "Gentlemen, you may not believe it, and I do not blame you, but Heaven is my witness—here is a man who does not know that my name is Cunningham." This is not unusual. Any operator will tell you that he has met Cunningham scores of times and has mortally offended him every time by asking his name.

Well, my tall man with the thin neck got along a little better than that when he handed the operator the following explicit message: Mrs. Sarah K. Follinsbee, Dallas Center, Io.:

MY DEAR WIFE: I left the city early this morning after eating breakfast with Prof. Morton, a live man in the temperance cause. I expect to eat dinner with you at home, but we were delayed by a terrible railroad accident, and narrowly escaped being killed; one passenger was terribly mangled and has since died, but I am alive. The conductor says I cannot make connection so as to come to Dallas Centre this morning, but I can get there by 8 o'clock this evening. I hate to disappoint you, but cannot help it. With love to mother and the children, I am your loving husband ROGER K. FOLLINSBEE.

The operator read it, smiled and said: "You can save considerable expense and tell all that is really necessary, I presume, by shortening this message down to ten words. We have no wire directly into Dallas, and will have to send this message part of the way over another line, which adds largely to the cost of transmission. Shall I shorten this for you?" "No, oh, no," the man with the shawl replied. "I'll fix it myself. Ten words, you say?" "Yes, sir." It was a stunner, for a fact, and the man heaved a despairing sigh as he prepared to boil his "letter" down to 10 words. He sighed again after reading it through once or twice, and then scratched out "Dallas Centre, Iowa," as though everybody knew where he lived. Then he erased "early" and drew his pen slowly through "breakfast with" and "in the temperance." Then he scratched over "dinner with" and went on to erase and "narrowly escaped." And so he went on through the dispatch. Occasionally he would hold it from him at arm's length after making an erasure, to get at the general effect. And at last, after much scratching and erasing and with many sighs, he came to the window and said: "Here is a telegraphic dispatch to my wife. I have not been able to condense it into ten words, and do not see how it can be done without garbling the sense of the dispatch, but if you can do it, you would oblige me greatly, as I do not wish to incur any really unnecessary expense. And with that he handed the operator the following expunged edition of his original message:

Mrs. Sarah H. Follinsbee:

MY DEAR WIFE—I left the city—this morning after eating—Prof. Morton alive—cause I expected to eat—you at home. But we were delayed by a terrible railroad accident on the railroad. I—being killed—terribly mangled and since died; but I am—the conductor.—I cannot—come to Dallas Center,—but I can.—I hate—mother and children. Your loving husband, ROGER K. FOLLINSBEE.

The operator smiled once more, and in his quick, nervous way that grows out of his familiar association with the lightning, made a few quick dashes with his pencil, and without adding or changing a letter in the original message, shriveled it down to its very sinews, like this:

Sarah A. Follinsbee, Dallas Centre, Iowa:

Left city 'smorning; delayed by accident; all right; home 'sevening.

ROGER K. FOLLINSBEE.

"There, that is all right," he said, in the cheery, magnetic way these operators have. "Fifty cents, sir; only 25 cents if we had our own wire into Dallas, sir; we'll have one next spring, too; saves you several dollars, sir. That's right, thank you." And the man went and sat down on a chair by the stove and stared at that operator until the rescuing train came along, as though he were a worker of miracles. And when he got off the train at the junction for Dallas I heard him whispering softly to himself: "Shfolinsbee —dlasn smorning; nothin smatter; home saftnoon." And I knew that he was practising his lesson and had "caught on."

INSANITY OF LOVE.

A Chicago Fool Kills Two Women and Commits Suicide.

From the Chicago Tribune, 9th.

Diedrich Peters, a lovesick and despondent German cigarmaker, made a deadly assault upon his former sweetheart, Frieda Kreikemeier, last night, shooting her three times, wounding her companion, Frances Maus, unintentionally perhaps, and then put an end to his earthly career by sending a bullet into his own head.

The affair occurred on Wentworth avenue, between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh street, all the parties concerned living within a block of each other. At ten minutes to 10 o'clock last night a cigarmaker named Fred Mardi, who was standing in front of a barber shop at No. 2616 Wentworth avenue, was approached by Peters, whom he knew by sight, and the usual greetings were exchanged. Before a conversation could be entered upon, however, Peters caught sight of Miss Kreikemeier, who was standing in front of No. 2620 Wentworth avenue, chatting with her friend, Miss Maus, who resides there and started toward them. When a short distance away from them he suddenly produced a pair of revolvers and began firing them rapidly at Miss Kreikemeier. At the first shot she dodged, and Miss Maus, with a cry of pain, fell to the sidewalk. Comprehending that Peters was shooting at her, Miss Kreikemeier turned and ran south toward Twenty seventh street, followed closely by him. Just before reaching Twenty-seventh street she leaped from the sidewalk to the street, and as she did so Peters fired again. She fell, but before he was upon her she gained her feet and started across the street. Here he fired another shot, and as she was about to step up on the walk the deadly revolver was again discharged. This bullet took effect in the side of her neck, and a jet of blood spurted out and deluged a young man named Macey, who caught her in his arms and carried her into Eindecker's saloon, on the corner of Twenty-seventh street. Seeing that the young woman was now out of his reach, he threw away one of the revolvers which was now empty, and, probably fearing pursuit, started on a run east on Twenty-seventh street. A few people who had kept their wits about them followed him up with the intention of arresting him, and he evidently understood what he had done and what his punishment would be in case he was captured. His mind was quickly made up, and just before he reached the alley between Wentworth avenue and Arnold street he crossed to the north side to the street, gained the sidewalk, placed the muzzle of the remaining revolver to his right temple, and blew out his brains.

He was a corpse when his pursuers came up to him The Twenty-second patrol wagon reached the scene just after Peters fired the shot that killed himself, and the body was loaded into the wagon and it was removed to the Morgue. In the pockets were a watch and chain, some small change, and $100 in bills. These effects were taken care of by the officers.

The shooting attracted an immense crowd of people, and the chances are that had not Peters ended his own existence the crowd would have taken the matter out of his hands and strung him up to the nearest lamppost. Mr. Mardi, with whom Peters spoke before beginning the shooting, followed him up as he approached the young ladies and was close enough behind him to catch Miss Maus as she fell. He carried her into the house, and as he came back to summon a physician, met a party of men bearing Miss Kreikemeier to her home on the second floor of No. 2616 Wentworth avenue. The latter young lady was obviously the most severely wounded of the two, and she was the recipient of the attention of the first surgeon who appeared. A Tribune reporter arrived on the scene shortly after the doctors had arrived, and saw Dr. A. S. Mansell, who was attending Miss Kreikemeier. He said her condition was critical, and that she must not be disturbed by an interview. She had received three shots, he said, the most serious having entered the back under the shoulder-blade and lodged under the right nipple in front. Another shot had entered the left side of the neck, and ranging downward was beyond the reach of the probe. The third wound was slight, being simply a flesh wound on the right side, the ball having struck a rib and glanced off.

Miss Maus, who was seen by the reporter, was lying in bed with her head bandaged, a ball having struck the cheek-bone on the right side and ranged upward, lodging under the scalp on the top of her head. She could not say much in regard to the shooting beyond the fact that she had only seen Peters once before, and she did not think he meant to shoot her. She acknowledged that Peters had at one time kept company with Miss Kreikemeier, and that they had a falling out, of the nature of which she knew nothing. She is 16 years of age, a rather pretty girl, and the daughter of respectable parents.

Upon the second floor of No. 2558 Wentworth avenue, which is occupied by Henry Kremer, the reporter found the room formerly occupied by Peters, but the people there could say little of him beyond asserting that he was "a nice man." In the drawers of his washstand were found some letters, and in his trunk some other letters, a revolver, and a new box of Smith & Wesson 32-calibre cartridges, from which five had been removed. From the contents of the letters and conversation among the neighbors, the reporter was able to get at the inside of the whole affair. For some time, up to three or four months ago, Peters, who was a rather pleasant-looking fellow of perhaps 30 or 32 years of age, had been paying attentions to Miss Kreikemeier, and matters had even reached a point where a ring had been given, and the wedding-day fixed for the latter part of July. In some manner there came a falling out, most likely, it was stated, because a young grocery clerk named Nodman had called upon her, and aroused in Peters a spirit of jealousy. At any rate they had a quarrel, and the ring was returned, since which time they had been together very little. The fact that he had lost the young woman did not seem to affect Peters half so much as the loss of the property which would have eventually fallen into his hands through his wife, she being an only daughter, and her father owning the property where they live. So he began thinking up a scheme whereby he could even matters up and in one blow secure his revenge at once upon the daughter and father. That the father was cognizant of this state of affairs is evident from a letter written by him to Peters and found in the latter's room. In this, which is written in German, Mr. Kreikemeier takes occasion to tell Peters that he is a dirty dog and a scoundrel; that he has heard of his dastardly scheme to harm him and his daughter, and that he warns him to do nothing of the kind. This seemed to have no effect upon Peters, who kept on scheming, and Monday resolved upon his plan of action. In a letter written by him and inclosed in an envelope addressed to Wilhelm Jarnand, 2614 Wentworth avenue, dated August 7, he says among other things that he is as good a man as Frieda or her father could have found, and that, being unable to secure either the property or the girl, he had resolved to shoot her, and then, in case it was necessary, to kill himself. There would be enough money found on his body, he said, to insure a decent burial.

A Church Penance.

London Special to New York Herald.

Great interest and no little amusement was excited by a scene last Sunday in a church at Clevedon, Somerset. A young man did public penance for the seduction of a girl, who was awaiting trial for manslaughter. The church was crowded. After evening prayer, when the vicar entered the pulpit, he told the congregation that they were about to deal with a matter of the most ancient character—a case of church discipline. The church-warden then brought the man into the church. On reaching the chancel steps he kneeled down, and the church-warden handed the vicar a paper, which contained the following declaration: "I, Llewllyn Hartee, do acknowledge myself to be guilty of a most grievous sin, for which I do hereby ask forgiveness of my fellow men, of the woman I have wronged and of Almighty God. In proof of my repentance I promise to carry out whatever penance may be laid upon me in presence of this congregation." The vicar accounted that the penance was that the man should go to the Assize Court and take his place by the unfortunate girl at the bar. In reply to the vicar's question whether he would accept the penance, he replied, "Yes." On Wednesday the girl was tried at the Wells Assizes and was sentenced to one month's imprisonment for concealment of the birth of her infant, the grave charge of manslaughter having been set aside. This incident has called forth much discussion in the papers. It is asked, "Are we going to have a revival of church discipline?" Some papers make a deal of fun of the case, while some Church papers treat it quite in an opposite style.

Big Game of Match-Penny.

Philadelphia Correspondence New York Sun.

Brokers in Third street talked of nothing else to-day but of the wonderful luck of one of their number at the game of matching pennies. The game was played on Saturday afternoon after the Stock Exchange had closed. In the office of a leading member of the Exchange a number of brokers got together and discussed the dullness of the market. One suggested to another in a spirit of fun that they match pennies. In the course of fifteen minutes all the pennies that could be got around the place had passed between the two gamblers, and to make it interesting they branched from coppers to five-cent pieces. Quite a good sum had changed hands in this way, and the game in a short time became exciting, the spectators entering into it with as much zest as the two participants, who by this time had become thoroughly absorbed in the game of chance. Becoming excited, they changed the five-cent pieces to dollars, and a large sum of money passed from one to the other. In less than an hour one of the players was a loser to the extent of $1,500. At this point there was a lull. Then the winner said he would give his opponent three chances to double or quit. This was accepted, and on the first match he lost, increasing the sum to $3,000. The second chance increased it to $6,000, and the third to $12,000. This brought the game to a close. The man who lost gave his notes for the amount and went home. To-day the story got out and went the full length of the street.

The Freaks of Fashion.

Cape May Letter to Cincinnati Commercial.

Many of the remarkable episodes in summer resort life are enacted "down by the beach." Yesterday I saw several couples meet for the first time this season in garbs totally unknown to most people in the West. The bathing suits worn here are more modern than those to be seen at most summer resorts. Styles in these garments in late years have changed considerably. Formerly a lady's suit comprised two pieces, one including the skirt and waist, and the other the drawers, while now the waist and drawers form one piece, the same as those worn by the males, and the skirt is the separate garment. The suits are worn shorter than ever, and George W. Hughes of Philadelphia, who owns the leading bath-suit rendezvous here, tells me he is unable to supply the demand for short drawers and high sleeves that are made upon him by the ladies. "The fact is," he says, "they can't get them too short." Blue is the rage, and they are usually trimmed with white. At Coney Island the most shocking bathing-suits in the world are worn. They consist of knit material, very similar to gauze, being, as my informant expressed himself, "next to nothing, and when they are wet it is simply a matter of gaze."

Treatment By Correspondence.

This paper is likely to fall into the hands of many of our friends of other days, our patients whom we treated long ago, or those who have heard of us through other persons by us cured, who may wish to consult us. To them we need hardly say that every year of the many that are now past has added much to our experience, and something, doubtless, to our skill; or, that our success is of late more uniform than ever before. It is probably enough for them to know how to reach us and lay their troubles before us. This can be done safely and satisfactorily by mail, and by observing carefully the following directions: Write plainly at the top of your letter the name of your Post-office, County and State. Give your age, height, weight, color of eyes and hair, sex, and state whether single or married. Describe your present symptoms plainly in your own language. Ladies or gentlemen, whether married or single, should not hesitate to write us all particulars concerning their condition, as no one sees patients' letters but the Doctor; give full particulars as to the past and present condition of health, appetite, stomach, bowels, whether loose or costive, and whether the feet, hands or head are usually cold or hot. If you have a cough say whether it is loose or tight, whether worse while lying down at night or getting up in the morning or after meals. And if you have reason to believe that you have rheumatism, kidney, bladder or any urinary disease, send us by express (charges prepaid), a small, clean bottle of your urine. All correspondence strictly confidential. Office hours, from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m.

Atlas Refining Company
vs.
T. L. Parsons et al.

It appearing from the petition herein duly verified by affidavit that the defendants William C. Scofield, Daniel Shurmer, John Teagle and Charles W. Scofield are non-residents of the State of Missouri, therefore, on motion of plaintiff by attorney.

It is ordered that said defendants be notified that a civil action has been commenced against them and others, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a dissolution of the partnership of the Parsons Oil Company No. 2, also for an accounting of the business of said firm and of the amounts due therefrom to the plaintiff, and for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of the assets of said partnership pending the litigation, and for an injunction.

And unless they appear at the term of this court to be begun and holden at the city of St. Louis, on the first Monday of October next, and on or before the third day thereof answer the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against them as confessed.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, a newspaper printed and published in the city of St. Louis.

John A. Dunn
Kate C. Miller, et al.
(53,960)

It appearing to the court from the bill heretofore filed herein that the defendants, Kate C. Miller, John T. Gait, her trustee, William G. Miller, Edward P. Miller and Casey Miller, an infant, are non-residents of the State of Missouri, wherefore, on motion of plaintiff by attorney,

It is ordered that said non-resident defendants be notified that a civil action has been commenced against them, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a decree that a certain paper, purporting to be a deed from Sarah Lucas to Andrew P. Gillespie, purporting to be dated March 23d, 1821, conveying to said Gillespie the following described property, to-wit: Lots number 1 and 2, with a front of 140 feet and 156 feet 2 inches respectively, on Grand avenue, by a depth of 250 feet 10 inches, and lots 17 and 18, having a front of 140 feet and 156 feet 2 inches respectively, on Spring avenue, by a depth each of 250 feet 10 inches, each and all of which aforesaid lots being in block No. 2 of Page and McPherson's subdivision of suburban lots, and designated and described as above in Book of Maps No. 3, page 4, of the Recorder's office of the county of St. Louis, State of Missouri, be annulled, canceled and declared of no effect, and that a certain judgment rendered in favor of Geo. C Miller and against this plaintiff, John A. Dunn, by the Circuit Court, of the County of St Louis, State of Missouri, on the 9th day of June, 1873, and entered of record on record book 51, page 503, and the execution and the return thereon be declared null and void and of no force and effect, and that the record of said judgment be made to show that said judgment has been canceled, declared null and void and of no effect, and that plaintiff be restored to all that he lost by reason of said judgment, and enjoining them from taking any action under said judgment or under the judgment of the Supreme Court reversing and remanding the cause of John A. Dunn vs George C. Miller's heirs, entered in the Supreme Court on the 6th day of March, 1881, and from proceeding to obtain possession of said property in any way before the final hearing herein, on the ground that said deed is alleged to be a forgery, and that said judgment in said Circuit Court was obtained by forgery and fraud; and unless they appear at the term of this court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis on the first Monday of October next, and on or before the third day thereof answer to the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against them as confessed, and decree rendered as prayed for.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published, according to law, in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, a newspaper printed and published in the city of St. Louis.

Assignees' Notices.

ASSIGNEE'S NOTICE.—Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, assignee of Flannery & Tuthill (a copartnership which was composed of Joseph Flannery and John P. Tuthill), has appointed Monday, September 4, 1882, and the two consecutive days thereafter, between the hours of 9 o'clock a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m. of said days, as the time, and the office of said late copartnership in the planing-mill premises No. 1440 North Twenty-third street, in the city of St. Louis, Mo., as the place, when and where the undersigned will attend in person and adjust and allow demands against the estate of said assignors, Flannery & Tuthill. All creditors who fail to attend at the place aforesaid during the time aforesaid and lay before the undersigned assignee the nature and amount of their demands will be precluded from any benefit of said assigned estate.

THERE are several first-class obituary notices in the Indiana Republican platform and taffy enough to catch all the flies in Hoosierdom.

THE science of Protection means simply: "I'll tax your business one dollar to help me and you tax me one dollar to help your business."

AT last accounts the new French Cabinet was hanging together in a homogeneous way. If nothing exciting rises in politics it may last a couple or three months.

KANSAS is a progressive State. The Republican Convention at Topeka is now clamoring for a constitutional amendment which will enable the ladies (God bless 'em) to vote.

ARABI PASHA has been thoroughly declared a rebel in every respect. The Sultan, at the request of his principal creditor, John Bull, has just polished him off with another proclamation.

THE Indiana Republicans gave the people a big dose of Civil Service Reform in their platform. It looks nice in a platform, and does not in the least interfere with the operations of JAY HUBBELL and the machine.

A STRANGER passing through Missouri and reading the comments of the Republican organs on Mr. FILLEY'S late manifesto would be likely to conclude that the Republican party was in danger of bursting open from an excess of Harmony.

THE statesmen who compose the Democratic State Central Committee of Missouri are mustering here to-day under the chieftainship of Hon. JOHN O'DAY. They should issue a decree defining the meaning and intent of the so-called temperance plank in the State platform.

THE Indiana Republicans have declared loudly in favor of home rule in Ireland, and for a system of peasant proprietorship which will guarantee every Irish family forty acres and a mule. This bait for the Irish vote is an indication that the managers have lost all hope of retaining the Germans in line.

THERE are 60,000,000 of Mohammedans under British rule in India. England's Indian army consists of 60,000 regulars and about as many native auxiliaries, while the aggregate of the various armies under the control of the Rajahs and Maharajahs is about 300,000. John Bull might lose India while grasping at Egypt.

AS a discoverer of political weather signs the Peirce City Empire is entitled to the cake. It says: "When the wife of a candidate begins already to pay back tea and coffee borrowed six years ago, it may be set down as a fixed fact that her husband will make the race, even if he fails to get the regular party nomination."

IT seems that Indiana Republicans, in the face of the fact that their State is developing "infant industries" of all kinds, are only in favor of collecting just enough tariff to meet the current expenses of the Government. If we have another Republican Congress or two the current expenses will mount up to such a figure that fifty per cent ad valorem will have to be added to all imported articles, and then everybody will be "protected" to the Queen's taste.

GOV. COLQUITT, of Georgia, who is training for the United States Senatorship soon to be vacated by BEN. HILL, made a speech at Acworth yesterday in which he proclaimed himself in favor of forever prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the State. Gov. COLQUITT is one of the leading Methodists of Georgia. He has great influence both in church and politics, and his outspoken position on this question shows how formidable the Prohibition movement is in the Empire State of the South.

IT is understood that Col. JEEMES BURNES is rushing to Congress on the ground that he displayed great heroism in adjusting the financial troubles of his friend ELIJAH GATES, late State Treasurer. We gather these facts from the Kansas City Times, which seems to be laboring under the hallucination that Philanthropists are needed in Washington City.

THE Prohibitionists in the Republican State Convention of Kansas yesterday cast 284 votes against 85 in choosing the temporary chairman. The minority find themselves such an insignificant faction in the party that they evade the real issue and plant themselves on a puling protest against a third term, which, they say, "threatens to alienate the support of a large body of Republican voters."

IT took 1,521 ballots to nominate Hon. J. M. RIGGS, the chairman of the convention, for Congress over Gen. SINGLETON in the Quincy, Illinois, District, and even then the Adams county delegates refused to make the vote unanimous. But the nominee produced an enthusiastic outburst of applause by a reference to SAMUEL J. TILDEN. This is a symptom that the Democratic party is again suffering from paralysis of the left optic.

WHO GETS THE $80,000?

The law did not compel the Fund Commissioners to accept the $3,000,000 paid by the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company. It was in fact a mooted and much disputed point whether they had any right to accept that payment or could do so without destroying or impairing the State's remedy against the company for the interest still to accrue on the outstanding bonds. They took the risk, however, of accepting it, a discretionary act, no law directing or compelling them, and then deliberately disobeyed a statute enacted in anticipation of the payment, and specifically directing what disposition they should make of the money. And this disobedience, it is estimated, will cost the State about $80,000 in the settlement ordered by the United States Circuit Court.

As the decision recites, Gov. CRITTENDEN in a special message, dated February 25, 1881, informed the Legislature of the purpose of the company to pay what it claimed was the full amount of its indebtedness to the State, and he asked the Legislature to provide by law for "the profitable disposal" of the money when paid. In response to this message the act of March 26, 1881, was passed and approved by the Governor, directing that any surplus money thereafter in the State Treasury and not necessary to defray current expenses or to meet appropriations should be "immediately" invested in the option bonds of the State; or, if there were no option bonds, "in any of the bonds of the State or bonds of the United States, the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad bonds excepted." Why was not this statute obeyed? The court holds that it was mandatory, that the company paid the money under the protection of this statute, and in paying the interest due on the bonds is entitled to be credited with whatever interest the $3,000,000 would have yielded if invested as the statute directed. But the Governor and the other Fund Commissioners turned the $3,000,000 over to the banks that pay a merely nominal percentage for the deposits of the State's money. As this percentage is obviously much less than would have been returned from the investment of the money as the law directed, the court decides that the State shall be charged and the company credited with the difference, which is estimated at about $80,000.

The banks holding the money have, of course, made on it all that the State loses, and more, too. The question therefore arises: Why did the Fund Commissioners violate the plain mandate of the law in a way that made the banks $80,000 richer and the State Treasury $80,000 poorer than would have been the result if they had obeyed the law? Ordinarily when public officials are caught in this sort of business, suspicious people will jump at the conclusion that there has been some kind of an arrangement with reference to a future division of the "swag." Our State officers were so eager to get hold of the money in this instance that they exercised a disputed authority and did what many lawyers proclaimed an unwise and dangerous thing for the State in accepting it. Then, having involved the State in litigation and loss, they deliberately set aside and disobeyed the specific instructions which they had asked for and received from the Legislature in regard to the disposal of the $3,000,000, thus transferring $80,000 from the State Treasury to the private coffers of the banks to which they have awarded the profits on the custody of the State's funds. If there is any satisfactory explanation of their conduct, we should be glad to hear it. It is notorious that State Treasury rings have made a great deal of money by violating the laws in regard to the custody and disposal of Missouri's money, and we would like to see an end of such transactions.

A FEW days ago a solitary highwayman in overalls and wearing a big mask swooped down on a buckboard wagon near Mt. Deseret, Maine, and deliberately robbed a pleasure party of six persons seated thereon. After he had gathered up all the loose change there was in the crowd, he politely remarked, "Your keepers, gentlemen," meaning thereby such chronometers as the ladies and gentlemen chanced to be seized of. The intellectual and philological Chief of Police at Mt. Deseret gives it as his opinion that the robber was a Western desperado because the term "keeper," as applied to a watch, is not used among the thieves of New England. Naturally this representative of the civilization and culture of New England is anxious to relieve the State of Maine of the odium of having a "road agent" within its borders, and it is not surprising that he should seek to fasten this crime upon the barbarous West, but as a matter of fact no Western highwaymen ever heard of such a thing as calling a watch a "keeper." That is purely a Yankee abbreviation of "time-keeper." Out this way our slang for watch is "super," as all intelligent people who have been robbed on the plains will testify. Of course this episode at Mt. Deseret has created consternation at all the watering-places where mountain excursions and solitary rambles are fashionable. Last year there was a daring bit of highway robbery in the White Mountains, and an effort was made to demonstrate that the JESSE JAMES gang had gone East for recreation, but the country settled down to the belief finally that the outrage was perpetrated by some summer resort hotel-keeper, who adopted this method of thoroughly cleaning out his patrons. It will probably be found on investigation that this Mt. Deseret robbery was the act of a New England society and club swell, who had run hopelessly behind in his hotel bill. In the name of the Great West we protest against being saddled with all the audacious and really first-class crimes of the country.

IT is with poignant sorrow that we refer to what seems to be the mental and cutaneous irritation of JOHN MONTEITH of Scotland, but not he of Montesano Springs, Mo. Referring the other day to the arrival of a regiment of Highlanders at Alexandria, we facetiously mentioned their bare, hairy legs and bulbous knees. This Mr. MONTEITH considered a national insult, and he wrote us a card yesterday which we published with a note offering a reward of $100 for any genuine descendant of the ancient Picts capable of grasping a joke. As a rule we do not deal in insults in a wholesale and national way and it may please Mr. MONTEITH to know that in our opinion the lower limbs of Scotchmen are as symmetrical as could be expected in a race of stalwart and somewhat angular men. The perpetual exposure of four or five inches on each side of the kneejoint, due to the peculiar uniform of the martial Highlanders in the service of the Queen, has a tendency to provoke capillary growth. Nature seeks to protect the exposed cuticle, and hence the hirsute adornment of a Highlander's knees is quite noticeable. It is altogether probable that if the Highland clans were to relapse into barbarism and wear less clothing than they do now they would become a very shaggy and hairy race of men. The male knee joints are not, as a rule, things of beauty. They lack roundness and they have a disposition to look scaly. Those carried around by the Highlanders are probably as good as the average, but so long as the army regulations require them to expose their knee-pans they must expect to have attention called to them by students of anatomy. We would suggest breeches and a nearer approach generally to civilization. It may please Mr. MONTEITH, of Scotland, to know that it is our opinion that if the First Regiment of St. Louis were dressed in kilts and paraded through the streets the exhibition of crooked and emaciated knees would create a more decided sensation than was caused by the recent advent of the tartaned legion at Alexandria.

THE Rev. JOB TURNER, a mute pastor from Staunton, Va., is entertaining the people of this city with pantomine descriptions of Mexico and the Mexicans, and is said to be very successful in talking intelligibly with his whole body so as to convey a clear idea of the facts he observed and of his impressions in regard to them, humorous and otherwise. To do this by means of poses and gestures, without the aid of conventional signs previously understood between him and those whom he is addressing, is a remarkable feat, and suggests the possibility of establishing a system of universal sign language which could be read the world over through the eloquence of its motions. The crude sign language which is the lingua franca of the plains from Alaska to Guatemala is limited in its scope, but readily understood by those who have to interpret it for the first time, and might be developed into a much more satisfactory means of communication for all who had not lost an arm or developed a game leg or a crick in the neck.

IN Illinois yesterday the State Convention of Prohibitionists adopted a platform declaring the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage "a sin against GOD and a crime and a curse to man which no human enactment or usage can make right." The convention declared that Christianity, humanity and patriotism all demanded its prohibition. It is certainly true that a vast amount of evil is embodied in the use and abuse of alcoholic stimulants, but there is no authority for a human convention to declare the manufacture of spirits a sin against GOD. We have but one work in which the desires of the Creator are recorded, and we do not find anywhere within its covers such a denunciation of alcohol as that thundered forth by the Reformers of Illinois yesterday.

THE German furriers of New York, in accordance with an old custom observed by their craft in Germany and France, held a Mottenfest or Moth Festival the other day, to pay respect to the lepidopterous insect which destroys the old furs and creates a demand for new ones. If the festive furriers should partake too freely of underdone ham and bologna on the day so dear to their craft, they might furnish the doctors and undertakers an occasion for holding a feast in honor of the trichina spiralis.

THE Governor of the State of Missouri says that he is acquainted with three reporters on the POST-DISPATCH and they are "the d——dest liars he ever knew." As a man who has done a fair share of lying himself and who might pass for an expert, the Governor's opinion is probably entitled to respect, but it grieves us full sore, as ANANIAS would say, to find the Executive of the fifth State of the Union making a blackguard of himself. We are shocked.

THERE has been some talk in Congress of reducing internal revenue taxes, but not the slightest suggestion of reducing the machinery for the collection of such taxes. Come what may, the expensive army of tax-gatherers and spies is to be kept up.—[Chicago Times.

If the offices were reduced in number how would JAY HUBBELL be able to raise his campaign funds without exciting bloodshed and rebellion?

WE are pleased to see an announcement in the Evening Post of Louisville, Ky., to the effect that the editor is going East to purchase a new outfit of machinery for his establishment. The Post was fitted up with new presses only a year ago, but the circulation of the paper has crawled ahead of the mechanical department. All good afternoon papers are booming this year.

ON the 15th inst. the ex-Confederates of Missouri will assemble at Sedalia. We are bound to have an interview out of Col. BROADHEAD on this subject. As a public man devoted to peace and the obliteration of the acrid memories of the war it is his duty to expostulate against this gathering of battle-scarred veterans.

BISMARCK'S organ sides with England on the Suez Canal question, and says that she can not be asked to subordinate her preponderating interest therein to the discussion of a non-English majority. This is the support which England was evidently expecting from the Power that has no direct interest in the canal.

HEAVY clothing and even overcoats in St. Louis in August! Think of it and then sigh for the butterflies of fashion gathered at Saratoga! Our correspondent writes that the heat there is intense, the nights being suffocating and the dust during the day intolerable.

IT seems that even a newspaper so stupidly and cautiously conducted as the St. Louis Republican can occasionally stumble on a libel suit which begets sensational scenes in and around the editorial haunts.

PERSONAL.

—Capt. Mayne Reid wears a red vest, and pulls it down only after repeated admonitions.

—Ernesto Rossi, the actor, is one of the most prominent persons at Paris receptions at present.

—The King of Siam rides a bicycle. His Majesty's favorite mule has probably been stolen.

—Mrs. Betsey Young, of Georgia, is seventy years old, has never taken a dose of medicine, and has never seen a railroad.

—A party of twenty-five Boston dry goods clerks is traveling in France. Egypt doesn't have all the bad luck this season.

—At some of the watering-places the villagers catch on to the edge of aestheticism by painting monograms on the sides of their carts.

—The Khedive has sent a steamer to Port Said on a secret mission. The people of Port Said have a right to be secretly warned that Mr. Hubbell is loose.

—A good scheme to prevent corruption in elections is to have the voter himself refuse the bribe. It's too new to work well just yet, but time may do something for it.

—A big brother at Fishkill, N. Y., made a young man marry his sister at the mouth of the revolver. It is understood that the young man is now kicking because the revolver did not go off.

—Hiram H. Arnold, aged 93 years, is dying in want at San Francisco. He claims to be a nephew of Pocahontas, the famous Indian Princess. Here is a fine chance for the Smith family to get even.

—The Rev. Mr. Henselman, of Canton, Ohio, is charged with kissing two married women and a widow, all the ladies being members of his congregation. Mr. Henselman must have been reading about Gen. Sherman.

—A Southern paper says that "Mrs. Caroline V. Copes, of Wilmington, N. C., recently deceased, was one of the girls chosen to throw flowers for Lafayette in Savannah in 1824. She was then about 13 years old, and she never forgot the kiss which the General gave her on that occasion." It is gratifying to know that Lafayette was one of the boys.

The Row Among the Foresters.

ST. LOUIS, August 9, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please publish these few lines in your worthy paper. I attended a meeting of St. Louis Court I. O. Foresters in August, 1881. The Deputy eulogized the officers elected at New York and told of the benefits to be derived from changing the name of the order. He was glad that Court Excelsior and a few other courts left the order. These fine officers enjoy themselves in New York and present Mr. Pike with a large gold medal, which he should be ashamed to wear, because it came from money belonging to widows and orphans. Mr. Patrick, secretary of the order, stated at that time the order was only $10,000 in debt. Yesterday's papers stated the order is $74,000 in debt, which shows what fine officers they were, since Mr. Patrick, as High Secretary, should have known that a year ago. I know a member of the order that died twenty months ago and the widow received no money yet, although Mr. Pike wears a gold medal. I would like to ask Mr. Patrick and the Deputy of U. O. F. how much longer they will place honey around their mouths, and how many more gold medals will be awarded at the expense of the widows and orphans.

Junior Hoodlums.

ST. LOUIS, August 10, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Whose duty is it to keep children from the street and away from business houses? Is it the parents' duty or the police's or the business man's duty? I should think it was the parents' or the police's duty, for if the business man says something the parents would of course get mad and then not patronize him any more. Therefore please say something about it in your daring paper on that subject and oblige A READER.

Street Car Etiquette.

ST. LOUIS, MO., August 9, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Recognizing the P. D. as a standard authority in matters of etiquette, we have decided to let you settle a dispute. Among the occupants of a crowded street car are a lady and her male escort. Another lady enters, and, after gazing hopelessly at the other gentlemen (?), who are absorbed in the perusal of their P.-D.'s, her appealing glance rests on the male aforesaid. A holds that the said m. e. should offer the newcomer his seat, while B claims that the gentleman's position as escort excuses him from doing so, as it would be impolite in him to leave the side of his lady friend. Please let us have your views on this question in your next issue and oblige A AND B.

[B is right. The giving up of seats in a public conveyance is a piece of forced politeness which is fast going out of vogue. A gentleman who is acting as escort for a lady should never surrender.—ED. P.-D.]

Not that John Monteith.

MONTESANO SPRINGS, August 10.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please protect me against any suspicion of my identity with the stupid fellow who throws slang at the editor-in chief of your paper and his Teutonic friends in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH. Sidney Smith said it requires a surgical operation to introduce a joke into the head of a Scotchman, and you say you will give $100 for a Scotchman who can take a joke. You may send your Highland correspondent to me for the surgical operation, and I will divide the $100 with George Bain whenever you will send a check for that amount. The large infusion of American blood disqualifies me from competition for the premium.

JOHN MONTEITH.

A Caledonian With Fun in Him.

ST. LOUIS, August, 9, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Hand over your $100. I am a Scotchman that can take a joke and can prove I laughed at your squib in last night's edition; but, of course, would not kick against such a thing. So, Mr. Editor, let me kindly hear from you.

I am, etc., SCOTTY.

[Unfortunately no name and no affidavit accompanies this communication.—ED. P.-D.]

A Journal That Appreciates Talent.

From the Sedalia (Mo.) Bazoo.

At last the onerous duties of the newspaper reporter are being recognized by managers of the great journals. The POST-DISPATCH, with its usual enterprise and liberality, offered a handsome gold watch as a prize to the reporter who would do the best and most work within a week's time. The prize was won by Mr. John Magner, one of the best reporters in the West. Mr. Florence White, of the same paper, came so near getting the prize that he was given a week's salary extra. In this matter the P.-D. has shown an appreciation of the efforts of the newsgatherers, which is most commendable, and should be most encouraging, as it doubtless is, to the reporters. It is an example of generosity many other newspapers might follow with profit to themselves and benefit to the public.

A Slight Raise of $80,000,000.

THE WINDSOR WAR.

Latest Phase of the Hotel Squabble Referred to a Commissioner.

The Windsor Hotel war is kept up with unabated vigor. This morning before Judge Thayer, in Circuit Court No. 5, Judge John M. Krum appeared to renew his application in behalf of the Livingstons for a receiver. The petition is directed against Ed. P. Barrett, Theodore Washburne, Wm. C. Jones, B. H. Engelke and others. The court on Tuesday directed an order to issue restraining the removal of the hotel property. Geo. J. Davis, the attorney, was represented by his sons, who said that he was at present Northern Michigan. Judge William C. Jones is fishing on the Gasconade, and no telegram can reach him. Manager Barrett of the Windsor Hotel is reported to be very sick and cannot leave his room. Mr. Davis said furthermore that he had asked Judge Jones' partner, F. X. McCabe, Police Commissioner, to attend the hearing, but he excused himself on the ground of being tired out. In spite of the above showing Judge Krum insisted upon a hearing, as this was the last day of the court sitting for the term.

Judge Thayer thought that the case might be referred to a commissioner, to report during vacation on some of the allegations in the Livingstons' petition, which, if sustained by evidence, would warrant the appointment of a receiver. The allegation that the corporate property was being pledged to secure individual loans was one allegation which might be referred.

Judge Krum doubted whether the court had authority to appoint a receiver during the vacation.

Judge Thayer appeared to have no doubt on that score. It had been done in cases of partnership. The latest petition of the Livingstons will therefore be referred and a report rendered to the court in chambers.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

James Walsh, W. P. Burns, Wm. Scott and Wallie Johnson will participate in a foot-race at Wheeler's Grove on Saturday, for $25 a side.

Louis Cain and George Martin, both small boys, were jailed last night on a charge of petit larceny, but were released by the Marshal this morning for want of prosecution.

John Baker and James Robinson, both colored, met at the house of Mr. Ripley, on Third street and Division avenue, last night, and settled an old dispute. Robinson attempted to use a knife, but was prevented by being struck over the head with a club in the hands of his antagonist. The witnesses separated the belligerents before much blood was spilled. Each party swore out a warrant against the other this morning in Squire Lynn's court for assault and battery and each paid a fine of $3 and costs.

A movement is on foot to amicably adjust the difficulty between the opposing wings of the Democratic party. Last Saturday a bitter quarrel grew over the election of delegates to the county convention, which threatened to terminate in bloodshed, but which resulted in the appointment of two sets of delegates and alternates. Last night both factions met at their respective headquarters and decided to compromise the matter. Each faction appointed a committee of five to select delegates from both factions to attend the convention. The committee will meet to-night.

THE NEW COLLECTOR.

Mr. Whitney Will Not Yet Name His Assistants.

Mr. C. M. Whitney, the recently appointed Collector of Customs and Surveyor of the Port of St. Louis, expects to assume the duties of that office in about ten days. There are a dozen good places at the disposal of the surveyor and the question of appointments is of considerable interest to a little army of office-seekers. To-day Mr. Whitney said: "I don't know who will be appointed. I will go into the office unpledged and untrammeled in any way. I have no relatives to put in position, and have pledged nothing to friends. I will go into the office and first learn the qualifications necessary for the various positions, and find how they are filled at present. I will not entertain any applications until then. I have received some, but I told the applicants that I would do nothing until I learned the working of the office. Notice of my appointment and the bond, filled out except the names, I have learned from a friend in Washington, will probably arrive to-morrow. The bond will be sent back signed, and I expect the commission will arrive in about ten days."

Since his appointment the new Surveyor has been fairly bestered with applicants.

A FAMILY FIGHT.

Scramble for a Forester's Mortuary Benefit—The Money in Court.

The relatives of Hugh Tully, deceased, are fighting over the money due the estate from the United Order of Foresters. The claimants are Margaret Tully, the mother; Mary McComas, the sister, and Mary Murphy, cousin. Isaac N. Byrnes and Court Missouri, No. 166, are likewise claimants. It seems that in September, 1880, Hugh Tully was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters. A certificate for payment at death of $3,000 was issued to him, and he continued to pay assessments thereon to the date of death. In August, 1881, the Independent Order of Foresters ceased to exist and the United Order took its place, receiving assessments of the members of the Independent Order. Four days before Tully's death he applied for a $2,000 certificate and directed that the proceeds should be divided between his mother and his cousin. The lodge presented a petition to Judge Thayer to-day asking to be allowed to pay the money into court. L. A. Steber made the application, and the court directed the money to be paid to the clerk with instructions to defray funeral expenses at once. If the parties can agree on distribution of the fund the matter can be disposed of on an agreed statement during court vacation; otherwise the beneficiaries will have to wait until October for trial of the case.

A COLUMBIA COMPROMISE.

Suit Against the Estate of D. C. Stone, a Director, Dismissed.

Judge Thayer to-day granted the petition for compromise of the Columbia receiver's suit against the estate of D. C. Stone, deceased. Mr. Stone was at one time a director of the defunct insurance company, but resigned some time prior to the dissolution. The proposition for settlement was made by C. P. Elierbe, and it was agreed to on the following basis:

An amount equal to the sum received by D. C. Stone for loan of securities with interest to date, together with a sum equal to that paid by James Lupe for the demands involved in the pending litigation, $5,900; an additional sum sufficient to make the above amount net to the Columbia estate $700. This settlement is to include the dismissal of the suit pending in the Supreme Court on appeal.

Collision on the Iron Mountain.

This morning at 8 o'clock, when the express train on the Iron Mountain Road reached the vicinity of Kimmswick, coming north, it suddenly confronted a construction train on the curve. The engineer of the express, seeing the danger, reversed his engine, and both he and his fireman jumped. A collision ensued, causing a wreck of the express engine and smashing two cars of the construction train. Fortunately nobody was hurt, but the incoming trains were delayed several hours. The accommodation arrived in the city about 10 o'clock, bringing the regular passengers through.

CARONDELET JOTTINGS.

The mechanics working on the elevator gave a hop at the Eastern Restaurant, and had quite a merry time.

A large delegation of Knights of Pythias from this part of the city will attend the Supreme Lodge session, to be held at Detroit, Mich.

Wm. Martin Koehler, the famous cornet player of the Arsenal Band, obtained his discharge from the service yesterday on account of sickness.

Work is to be commenced in a week on the other new elevator at Carondelet. About 100 extra men will be employed, so as to put the building through in short order.

The employes of the Missouri Pacific Elevator Company presented Mr. Arthur Smith, their superintendent, with a very handsome gold watch and chain on Tuesday, in honor of his 29th birthday.

With cooler nights comes the pressing into service of box cars for lodging places. Five tramps were this morning fined $10 each for being caught in a car belonging to the Iron Mountain Railroad Company.

Brilliant Division, No. 55, Knights of Pythias, adjourned last night for two weeks to enable the members to attend a Pythian entertainment at Pope's Theater on the 16th.

Postmaster Reber appeared in court this morning as complainant in a case against John McFall. A dead horse was allowed to remain 52 hours before removal. A fine of $50 was imposed by the court. Defendant was not represented.

The Amalgamated Steel and Iron Workers give a picnic on Sunday next, and, desiring to be flush, appointed a committee to confer with the Vulcan Company and request payment on Saturday. The request was refused and pay day put off until the 19th.

The corner stone of the Babcock and Hook and Ladder Company building was laid at 5:30 last evening, and quite a jolly time was made out of it. Jacob Huppert had been selected as the orator of the occasion, and as he ordered out a box of champagne his speech was pronounced a model of eloquence. Names of many of the prominent citizens of Carondelet were placed in a box under the stone; also a copy of the POST-DISPATCH containing a notice of the building with name of contractor.

BELLEVILLE.

Curt. Heinfelden, editor of the Belleville Zeitung, returned yesterday from a trip to Salt Lake City.

Max Schmidt, a wagon-maker on Illinois avenue, while setting a tire was cut across the forehead, into the bone, by the tire striking him.

Mr. Davis, engineer of a portable machine, while threshing on Mr. Schimisseur's farm, had one of his arms nearly torn from his body by his clothing being caught in the driving wheel.

Pat Keefe, who assaulted H. G. Badgely with a shot-gun a few weeks ago, had a hearing yesterday before Squire Challenor and was discharged. The evidence failed to show that he intended to kill when he made the assault.

SARATOGA INKLINGS.

A Red-Hot Summer Resort—Consolation for the Stay-at-Home Club—The Races.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND UNION HOTEL, SARATOGA, August 6.—Saratoga, which boasts a resident population of 11,000 people, is now swarming with 30,000. It is as hot as fire, even the nights are not cool, and not a drop of rain has fallen since July 4th. The dust is simply fearful, and at the races yesterday, the fourth and last day of the Saratoga summer meeting, so intense was the cloud of dust that at the close of the magnificent run for the Saratoga Grand Prize, the timers were unable to take the time of the last mile, and the leaders kicked up a cloud that completely hid five of the seven horses. The favorites, Thora and Ben d'Or, were completely distanced, and Glidelia galloped away from them in magnificent style. It was said to have been the finest race of the season, and an immense amount of money changed hands. The betting at Saratoga is by no means confined to the men; the women send out every morning for the racing cards and put their heads together over them. Of course, the prospect of a dark horse winning never enters their little noddles, and every woman at Saratoga who bet lost on Thora and Ben d'Or. Of course, this is all done on the sly, and is supposed to be "just for fun," but it is more for the money than the fun that it is indulged in. Across the way is Morris', the club house, where every man in Saratoga, except the visiting clergymen, drops in about 12 o'clock. By far the larger proportion of them are men without the suspicion of a sport or a blackleg about them, but it is one of the sights of Saratoga, and it is the correct thing to do. The races are the great feature of Saratoga life, and everybody goes—the townspeople, the country people, the hotel people—all, without exception. Barnum's circus was in town, too, which made Saratoga at this particular time just about the liveliest place on this continent. Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt and family are at the United States Hotel. He has several horses up here with him, among others the incomparable Maud S., and his double team, Lysander and Leander, that made the best time recorded for a double team until a few weeks ago, when Mr. Work, of New York, beat it by three seconds. Friday morning I walked down to Mr. Vanderbilt's private stables, back of Congress Hall, to see the great trotter. The head groom at once and obligingly showed me into the stable, and to the stall of the pride of Mr. Vanderbilt's heart. When he opened the door of the stable, there stood a big, well-made Kentucky horse, not particularly striking at first to an untrained eye, but after a few minutes examination, the most ignorant man or woman in the world on the subject of horse flesh would see, that she was something remarkable. She is rather an ugly color a dingy chestnut, but her skin is smoother and glossier than satin and it is one of the indulgences of this dainty creature, to be curried and rubbed down by the hour. Her head is simply beautiful, and her eye has the intelligence of a human being in it. She is the gentlest and best disposed animal in the world, and the head groom steadily maintains that she does not know how to bite or kick. Mr. Vanderbilt does not drive her at all now, as she is in training for the fall races, but every day her trainer takes her out on the road, where she is the cynosure of all eyes as much as the beauty of a ball room. The groom mentioned that Mr. Vanderbilt paid $21,000 for her, and she won exactly $21,000 the first season she was out on the turf. Mr. Vanderbilt divided her winnings between the trainer and the jockey. The groom also mentioned the way her second owner, Capt. Duer, of Louisville, came into possession of her. He and another gentleman from Louisville bought a colt each at a sale of yearling colts. When the colts were sent to them Capt. Duer's was distinguished by having a halter around her neck, which in the journey slipped off, so when they got to Louisville neither gentleman knew his purchase. Capt. Duer fancied Maud S., and took her at hap-hazard, and, if I am not mistaken, he was the person who sold her to Mr. Vanderbilt. Mr. Vanderbilt has a standing offer of $100,000 for her for breeding purposes, the instant any accident happens to her that unfits her for the track. One doesn't like to come away from home to be overcome with splendor; but the Grand Union Hotel is certainly calculated to make a provincial's eyes open pretty wide. There are eighteen hundred rooms in the hotel, and over fifteen hundred servants employed. The contrivances for getting the crockery and tableware to the pantries is very ingenious, being a tin tub on wheels calculated to hold exactly so many dozen of cups, plates, etc. The house is very crowded just now, a political pow-wow being in progress. Several of the Republican leaders in the New York Legislature have assembled here, and much speculation is indulged in in regard to the schemes they are concocting, with locked doors, and mysterious telegrams to and from Albany. Saratoga always was a great place for politics and politicians, and some of the most nefarious jobs ever conceived and executed were born and reared in the political atmosphere of Saratoga.

When the news came of the President's veto of the river and harbor steal Saratoga fairly boiled over. If a vote had been taken then and there, President Arthur would have been renominated by acclamation by both Republicans and Democrats, and when the New York papers came unanimously upholding the President there was tremendous enthusiasm. The indignation against the bill is loud and outspoken, and not one single word of justification for it have I heard yet. There are vast numbers of Northern people here, and scarcely more than a sprinkling of Southern and Western families. The waii goes up for more dancing men. Three times a week a full dress hop is given at the Grand Union at which five hundred women and three or four men show up. One man who has been here three seasons says that the first season he brought his evening suit and was tormented out of his life with going to the balls, etc. The next season he brought it up, but lied about it every time he was asked, protesting he had left it in New York. This season he has actually left it in New York and prays mightily that the moths may have eaten it up before he returns. But the women don't need any coaxing to wear their good clothes, and it astonishes the unsophisticated when one sees laces and silks and jewels enough to stock an establishment worn by a lady in the morning, and, when splendor has apparently been exhausted, to see the same thing in the evening, multiplied in costliness. But the taste of excessive dressing at a watering-place is questionable. In one respect they have something to learn from their Southern sisters, and that is, how to dress for warm weather, and much warm weather is to be experienced at Saratoga. For a hot day, nothing ought to be admissible but a thin white dress, but the hotter the day the more the velvets and satins and chains and bracelets are piled on. If the inconvenience of elaborate dressing could be confined to the people who do it, nobody would complain, but to persons of sensitive temperament it is a species of torture to see the sufferings of the devotees of the costumer. Tagged Through.

Yesterday morning two children, Robert and Mary Keck, 6 and 8 years old respectively, passed through the city en route to Koppel, Texas. The children left Cleveland, O., on Tuesday, in charge of a Bee Line conductor, and, on their arrival in St. Louis, were promptly transferred to the care of a conductor on the Missouri Pacific train. Each child wore, tied around its neck, a tag stating its name, age and destination. They are both bright, pleasant-looking children, and seemed to enjoy their long ride hugely.

Blanche Douglass.

From a New York Letter.

I've been down to Coney Island again. One of the sights that rewarded me for the trip was Blanche Douglass, and I take great delight in rubbing the gilt off that particular piece of gingerbread by truthfully describing her as about the most commonplace, vulgar-looking, unattractive young woman on the whole three miles of beach. Those Connecticut countrymen who thought her a bewitching figure in the Malley trial must have had hard luck all their lives in viewing the opposite sex. She was with a party of women, some of whom were quite ladylike in dress and deportment; but they had all come down for an afternoon frolic, and the majority took no pains to conceal their recklessness. How Walter Malley, a college graduate, could be infatuated by a woman who says, "Lib, I ain't got no han'kercher—lend me yourn," to say nothing of other blemishes, is away beyond my comprehension. But I must use the creature to illustrate the fashions or she is out of my field. She was well enough dressed in a dark blue and white check silk skirt covered with wide plaited flounces, each headed with a narrow plaiting of blue surah, and a corsage and overskirt of plain blue silk. Her straw hat was moderately broad-brimmed and was worn flat on top of her head. Her shoes were buttoned sandals, her stockings blue silk, her long mitts drab and her parasol blue-figured. She and her companions had a dinner at Brighton, and afterward went into the surf. Several wore a new style of bathing costume, made up of close-fitting waists, short trousers and stockings, without any skirt, and looked, when wet, like an "Olivette" chorus struck by a waterspout. But Blanche was inconspicuous in conventional, loose, ill-shaped blue flannel, hired from the bath-master. Those in the other garb had brought their suits in hand-bags. To do Blanche justice, she seemed to desire an avoidance of recognition, and when at length her identity began to be noised about and a crowd began to collect, she withdrew into the bath-house.

To Glory for the Queen.

From the Chicago Times.

How it will cheer the noble redcoat, as he sweats under the pyramids or pants in the desert, carrying the musket that is to open the route to India, or spills his blood through a Bedouin-made wound into the sand, that his gracious sovereign, the Empress of India, was pleased to suspend for a moment her interest in the yachtsmen assembled at Cowes, and direct that an out-bound transport-ship with detachments of the household cavalry en route for Egypt should quit its ordinary route in order to pass under her eyes as she stood with her guests on the terrace at Osborne! She signaled Godspeed to the ship. There's inspiration for a whole ship-load of food for powder. And her hoepful son Albert Edward, who is colonel of half a dozen regiments and never set a squadron in the field, added to the brigh hess of the occasion by going out to the ship in the royal yacht and bidding the household cavalry go where glory and the Bedouins waited them. What a sweet privilege it is, to be sure, to be disembowled by an Arab or buried by a sand-storm for the honor of this dear old woman and her very agreeable eldest son!

Fast Time to Atlantic City.

From the Atlantic City Times.

"Let me have a clear track and I promise you I will cover the distance between Camden and Atlantic City inside of an hour," recently remarked Engineer Edward Osborne, who handles the throttle of the Shaw locomotive now running on the Camden and Atlantic Railroad. "Last Sunday I ran the new paper train down in sixty-nine minutes, which, after deducting two minutes for each of the stops and slow-ups, makes the actual running time fifty-three minutes. Why, it is really astonishing," contined Mr. Osborne, "the speed that can be gotten out of that engine. No one knows how fast she can travel. If the company would allow me I would soon put her to the test and see what she can do. She has only been in use on this road about five weeks, and during that time she has covered over 4,000 miles without loosening a bolt. I have been an engineer twenty-four years and I must say it is the nicest locomotive I ever rode on."

Dr. Mudd's Petition.

Washington Special to the Chicago Times.

A rather singular petition found its way into the petition-box of the House of Representatives to-day, indorsed with the name of Representative Chapman, of Maryland. It is from Dr. Samuel Mudd, of Maryland, the surgeon who attended to the assassin Booth's injuries after the latter had escaped from Washington, and who, for this action, was sent to the Dry Tortugas. The doctor sets up the claim that while confined in that place he nursed and rendered services to a large number of United States soldiers who had been stricken with yellow fever, and asks the Government to award him some compensation for the same. His petition is accompanied by affidavits and other evidence to back up his claim.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA.

Flowers as head decorations are obsolete. An aigrette or bunch of feather tips is the correct thing.

In London little sons of Ham are now coming into use as pages for ladies of the upper social circles.

Some of the sashes of the season are of the most magnificent description, covered with hand-painting.

Fancy colored ribbon hat-bands for the rich-papa young men are now very much the fashion.

Fancy painted white dresses, which are seen at the seaside, suggest a holiday among circus people.

Very high heels and pointed toe shoes render it somewhat difficult for the girl of the period to get about.

So natural are the artificial flowers on some of the hats and bonnets that they attract even the humble-bee.

A lady at Saratoga has created a sensation by appearing with a bird of Paradise mounted on her sunshade.

Most elegant and stylish of all the season's fans are those of black ostrich feathers mounted on ebony sticks.

Combination suits of black and red surah are seen at the watering-places, and are very dashing and effective.

The "Elberon walk" is the latest. It is something between the "Grecian bend" and the "Lady Longedale limp."

According to the Bazar, satine is the most fashionable material for the cotton dresses worn in the morning at summer resorts.

Oriental embroidery is the proper work to be engaged on while seated on the hotel piazza, even if you do not take but one stitch every other hour.

One rarely sees the low-neck-and-short-sleeves young lady any more except in picture books, but of decollete costumes there is too much exhibition.

Magnesia is used largely by women now to enhance the beauty of their complexions, instead of white powder. Magnesia is also used by clowns in the circus.

Cups used at an afternoon tea at Nantucket the other day are said to have been originally owned by Mary Queen of Scots. Such cups are hard to swallow with.

Black silk costumes heavily trimmed with jets make very "elegant and dressy outfits," to quote Chicago belles, and are very much worn at Saratoga and Long Branch.

THE UXBRIDGE MYSTERY.

The Seven Years' Wonder of a New England County.

Uxbridge (Mass.) Cor. New York Times.

Three suits for damages of $50,000 each, two of them for breach of promise and the third for seduction under promise of marriage, all within a single week, rarely fail to the lot of of the average mortal. Those who have watched the course of the defendant for some years past say they are not surprised at these wholesale legal proceedings. Whatever their result may be, they have already had the effect of bringing into sudden newspaper notoriety a man of wealth whose affairs are so shrouded in mystery that he has acquired among his neighbors the soubriquet "The Uxbridge Conundrum." Ordinarily a man who keeps his own counsel, pays his debts and leaves his neighbors alone attracts little attention, even in a country community. "Dr." Levi Wilson, whose amours have made him so conspicuous a figure of late, does all these things, and yet for seven long years he has been a mystery to his townsmen, and, it must be confessed, not without good reason. Worcester county has been all agog over him for half that period.

"Dr." Levi Wilson has probably expended in Uxbridge, in the way of improvements, etc., within the last seven years, $150,000 in hard cash. Until a week ago he was the owner of a hotel, of cottages, and other real estate. He still owns horses, carriages, jewelry and diamonds which fairly blind the eyes of the rural residents of Worcester county. Whatever he takes a fancy to, and he is a man of many whims, he buys and pays for outright. No creditors ever darken his doorway, and with bill in hand dun him for their lawful dues. He has been seen on many occasions with $10,000 in bills in his pockets. His bank deposits have been known to be as large as $90,000. He has never inherited money. He never had money until it began to pour in suddenly upon him seven years ago. He is only 29 years of age. He is not to-day engaged in any known business which yields an income, yet his wealth is variously estimated at from $250,000 to $500,000. Where, then, ask his neighbors, do his riches come from?

There can no longer be any doubt that Wilson's money comes direct from Mr. Philip L. Moen, of Worcester. All the deposits made by him in the Blackstone National Bank were of checks drawn by cashiers of Worcester banks, indorsed by Philip L. Moen, and made transferable to Wilson. On such checks the deposits in this bank alone have amounted to upward of $200,000. All told it is estimated that Wilson must have received from this source in the last three years $300,000. Nobody but himself and Mr. Moen know the exact amount. Mr. Moen's intimate friends have wondered at the connection existing between him and Wilson. Mr. Moen owns a third interest in the two great wire mills controlled by the Washburn & Moen Company. Upward of 3,000 persons are employed by the company, and its business amounts to some millions of dollars yearly. Mr. Moen's personal income is represented to be nearly a quarter of a million annually. He stands high in the community, has always enjoyed an excellent reputation, and is, moreover, a deacon in the Worcester orthodox church. What can be the nature of the bond that unites the worthy churchman and his amorous young protege is a puzzle to the members of society in Worcester. It is known that many persons who own patents on wire-making processes are employed by Washburn & Moen, and in addition to a regular salary receive a royalty for the use of the patents. The firm has a monopoly of these patents, controlling all of them in this country, save one, which is owned by a Vermonter. Mr. Washburn was asked by the writer what authority Wilson had for ever using the name of the firm. He replied: "Wilson has no business relations with this firm and we pay him no royalty on any patent. What Mr. Moen's relations are I cannot say, for, if you will believe me, I will tell you that I do not know." Though courteous in his manner, Mr. Washburn was reserved in his speech. Whatever the nature of the secret between young Wilson and Deacon Moen it has never been made public. All that the people can know about it, unless the two men choose to speak, is what is contained in this article. A part of this seven years' mystery is fathomed when it is asserted that the source of Wilson's income is Deacon Moen's bank account. Why this should be may properly be left with Mr. Moen as a part of his own business. The mystery with the Worcester county people now is, not where Wilson's money comes from, but why does it come from where it does?

Some Craniology.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

We have noticed a paragraph going the rounds of the press—one of those paragraphs which appear and disappear alternately, resurrected at regular intervals by editors of "patent outsides"—which calls for refutation. We refer to the little statement in circumlocution regarding the enormous dimensions of the brain of Napoleon Bonaparte.

The fact is that the majority of readers in America and Europe have been deceived by this tradition regarding the great Corsican's Cuvieresque brain. Even Victor Hugo was deceived by it when he wrote the famous lines about that "prodigious brow, that skull shaped to the mold of the imperial globe!" Tradition begotten by enthusiasm, exaggerated by admiration, has made Napoleon an intellectual giant, and magnified the size of his brain beyond all reasonable dimensions. But this legend has been fully exploded within late years by M. Louis Peysse, a French physiologist of note and a brilliant writer upon positive topics.

"What is really striking in the skull of Napoleon," says the writer, "is the smallness of the skull. Compared with the busts by Canova, and especially by Chaudet, the real head looks mean, because the sculptors have enormously exaggerated the frontal region."

Although very well proportioned there was nothing remarkable about it. The circumference (20 inches 10 lines, old French measure) was a common one—if anything, below the average of adults rather than above it. The frontal angle was very common. It did not really exceed 75 degrees, but the artists make an exaggeration of 15 degrees in medallions and busts. Finally, according to the phrenological system of Spurzheim, the only organ remarkably developed in the skull was that of dissimulation, if we can believe the report of Dr. Antomarchi.

It is quite true that cranial capacity increases in proportion to the intellectual development of races. There are remarkable differences between skulls of the twelfth and skulls of the nineteenth centuries. Our cranial capacity is larger than that of the men of five hundred years ago in Occidental Europe—although not perhaps larger than those of the splendid races which founded the antique civilization. Dr. Broca's statistics upon the subject are curious, although relating to France especially. Cuvier and Byron had remarkably large brains; but although weight of brains may be taken as an indication of intellectual power when national averages are compared, it affords no trustworthy index of individual superiority of intellect. Idiots have had brains as large as Byron's, and a famous murderer who died upon the scaffold in recent years possessed a capacity almost capable of containing the vast brain of Cuvier. A surer index is the number and complexity of the cerebra circumvolutions; increasing the quantity of gray substance by their number and length, they increase also the mental faculties under normal circumstances. What the precise character of Napoleon's brain was we do not know, nor have we any means of ascertaining at this date, but the story regarding its extraordinary size is purely imaginary.

Interrupting a Honeymoon.

New London (Conn.) Special Dispatch.

A man about forty years of age named Crow, owning a small property in the town of Montville, buried his wife Saturday, July 29th, has been employed for some time past by two elderly maidens named Fellows, and of a consequence has visited their house quite frequently on terms of intimacy, and at times remaining longer than was thought prudent or necessary by the thoughtful neighbors. Less than two days after the burial of his wife he visited the Fellows' house, and Miss Jane, who is said to be rather weak-minded, returned the visit. As a result they drove to Norwich last Friday and were married by Judge Young, returning the same evening to the house of Crow. The officious neighbors, viewing their conduct as suspicious and scandalous, paid them a twilight visit, and dragging him from the matrimonial couch, adorned him, it is said, with a dress of tar and feathers. Miss Fellows is said to be highly connected, both in Montville and Hartford. It is also rumored, in connection with this affair, that the body of the late Mrs. Crow is to be exhumed, which, if true, indicates suspicion of foul play. Montville is intensely agitated over the matter.

Langtry and Her Future.

London Letter to New York Tribune.

The principal object of interest just now is Mrs. Langtry and her future career. Now that Mr. Abbey has arranged for her tour in the United States it is held above all things necessary that she should leave England with eclat. She either has a very wise head on her own handsome shoulders, which, by the way, changed the fashion from "sloping" to "square," or she has wise heads to think for her. In this she has that good fortune which seems to attend her in most things. Until the "Jersey Lily" became the Professional Beauty of the day, it was thought that "P. B.'s" should have sloping shoulders, like the Venus de Medici; but she has changed all that. Good square shoulders, "like a man," and, if possible, a small head set on a bull-neck, are what is looked for in womankind at this moment. The swan-like beauties have their noses out of joint.

Mrs. Langtry has recognized, then, or somebody has pointed out to her, that her period of enormous salaries and receipts will not outlast that curiosity which her handsome personal appearance and social celebrity have excited. It is not often that the public see a lady step out of society upon the stage. So great was her reputation that her success, if she could only get through a part, was certain. But she has done much more than score just a success. She has been the greatest success as a "star" actress ever known, and has developed extraordinary capacity for her newly-adopted profession. She plays very differently from the style of that winter evening when she first appeared at Twickenham. There is every probability that she will become an excellent actress of a certain class of parts extremely difficult to fill. Among the many enterprising damsels who aspire to the stage there are very few who by any flight of fancy could be imagined to be ladies. They have pretty little snub noses, and fluffy heads and good figures, but are no more like ladies than a pug or a poodle is like a greyhound. Mrs. Langtry has not only the enormous advantage of appearance and manner, but that of voice and accent. The voice is full, rich and round, the enunciation clear and distinct and the accent free, of course, from any trace of vulgarity. It is the voice and accent of the higher as distinguished from the slovenly gibberish of the lower class of English people. In her acting she has so much improved that she is now studying the somewhat difficult part of Rosalind.

Emblematical.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A carpenter, who recently opened a shop on Grand River avenue, went to a sign-painter and told him he wanted him to paint an emblem representative of industry and perseverance, leaving it to the man of brush what form the emblem should take. The other day the painter appeared with a board on which he had painted the likeness of a man, and announced that he had finished the job.

"That's no emblem!" exclaimed the carpenter as he stood off and surveyed it.

"That picture represents industry and perseverance, and that's what was wanted," was the reply.

"Why didn't you paint me a beaver or a bee-hive?"

"My friend, that is the likeness of a ward politician who has been hunting for office for twenty one years, and I want to tell you that for industry and perseverance he can double-discount all the beavers ever heard of and all the bee-hives in America."

It was nailed up in place.

A Message From the Dead.

From the London News.

A Plymouth correspondent says a strange incident is reported in that town. On Tuesday evening a young man residing at Davenport called upon the editor of a local paper and begged to be informed if any telegrams had been received giving the names of Englishmen killed during the day in Alexandria. He was informed that no such message had been received. He mentioned that during the afternoon the mother and wife of a petty officer named Revington, serving in Alexandria, had what they regarded as "a token of his death." They were sitting together in their house when they heard or thought they heard, the voice of the absent son and husband say "Mother" three times. With forebodings upon them, the brother was dispatched to the nearest newspaper office, with the result indicated. On Wednesday the relatives of Mr. Revington received a telegram from the Admiralty to the effect that he was shot in the streets of Alexandria on Tuesday, while serving on police duty.

Fooling Pittsburg Bartenders.

From the Pittsburg Post.

For some time past bartenders in this city have been swindled by P. H. Rosenberger, who conducted his operations in this wise; He would enter a saloon, call for a drink, and offer in payment a genuine silver dollar. Before the bartender could pick it from the counter Rosenberg would say: "See here, I don't want to swindle you; that's a counterfeit." The barkeeper would then scrutinize the coin, and admire what he believed was a clever imitation. The confidence man would then ask an offer on so many pieces to be delivered as per sample. A contract was commonly made at fifty cents on the dollar. A number were victimized in this way, and after making cash advances would receive in return boxes filled with fragments of scrap iron or other worthless material. Rosenberger has been arrested. He made a full confession, and urged the excuse that if people were willing to buy counterfeit coin it was little pity they should be swindled.

Mr. Blaine Says He Won't.

Chicago Times' Boston Special.

In a conversation on the cars, a night or two ago, Hon. James G. Blaine said to a friend: "As I feel now, nothing would induce me to enter into a contest for any public position. I went into public life with Gen. Garfield. We were associated together, and were warm personal and political friends from that time forth. I entered his Cabinet from the Senate to identify myself with his Administration. I was in full harmony with his views, and his death seemed to complete the era in American politics to which we both belonged. I have no regrets nor any revenges to satisfy. I have thousands of warm friends whose esteem and regard is of priceless value to me. It will always be my pleasure to serve them. I am content with the past, and I find the greatest pleasure in the pursuit of my private affairs. I am ardently a Republican, and shall take an active interest in public affairs as long as I live, but as I feel now I could not enter any contest for any public position."

A Quarrel in London High Life.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

Mr. Joseph Albert Sassoon and Mrs. Rebecca Sassoon, his wife, staying at the Grosvenor Hotel, were charged before Mr. D'Eyncourt, at Westminster yesterday, July 19, with unlawfully conducting themselves in a noisy, turbulent and disorderly manner, to the great annoyance of Sir David Sassoon, K. C. S. I. Mr. Poland, who appeared for the prosecution, said that at 8 o'clock on the night of the 14th the defendants came to Sir Albert's house, and each taking hold of a bell they created a great disturbance by persistent ringing. The police were sent for, and a large crowd collected, but the defendants remained till 2 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Joseph Sassoon said she and her husband were starving, although they were both living at the Grosvenor Hotel.

The defendants remained about all night, and at 8 o'clock on Sunday morning again presented themselves at the house and continued the annoyance, which had also since been repeated. Mr. Dutton, on behalf of the defendants, said the son thought he was entitled to an allowance from his father, and maintained that he had a perfect right to go to his father's house to ask for his allowance. Mr. D'Eyncourt said that it was idle to advance such a contention, and begged the parties not to go into the disagreeable details of a very painful family quarrel. Eventually the case was adjourned, on the promises of the defendants not to annoy Sir Albert in any manner. As Sir Albert Sassoon was leaving the witness box, his son, the defendant, kissed his hand in an impassioned manner, saying, as he did it: "After twelve years I see my father, and I hope he will forgive me."

Æstheticism in Ohio.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dame Rumor whispered the announcement yesterday that two well known Cincinnati people will to-day embark on the sea of matrimony either in Toledo or Sandusky, this State. It is another case of winter and summer uniting, let us hope prompted by Cupid himself. The bridegroom-to-be is none other than Ben Pitman, who has almost reached the allotted three score and ten, being almost 68 years old—a widower. Some three or four years ago his wife departed this life, and her remains were taken to Washington, Penn., where they were cremated. The ashes were placed in an urn, which now ornaments the Pitman home in the East End. It is said that Adelaide Nourse is to be the happy bride. She is but 20 years of age, and formerly a pupil of Mr. Pitman. Up to a short time ago she lived with two orphan sisters on Falke street, Corryville, and, like them, is an artist of no mean ability, while intellectually she holds a commanding position. She is possessed of a considerable amount of this world's goods, having inherited it from her father, who was a man of wealth and prominence in this city.

Cetewayo in England.

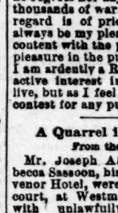

London Special to New York Tribune.

The public are much amused with Cetewayo, though arriving too late to become the lion of the season. Though officials desire as little fuss as possible, he is an interesting object to the populace. Quaint remarks and good humor are arousing sympathy, and may lead the Government to regret bringing him unless they mean to restore him. He has had no official reception, but the Queen sees him next week. He fondly hopes to argue his claims to restoration before her. The officials are doing everything to keep Cetewayo out of the clutches of the Aborigines Protection Society.

DIED.

DUFFY—On Wednesday, August 9, 1882, at 1:20 o'clock p. m., MARY, widow of the late Thomas Duffy, aged 57 years.

The funeral will take place Friday, August 11, at 9 o'clock a. m., from family residence, Victoria avenue, between Baltimore and St. Louis avenues, to St. Teresa's Church, thence to Calvary Cemetery. Friends of the family are invited to attend. Carriages will leave Cullen & Kelly's promptly at 8 o'clock.

BRUCE—On July 29, at 8 a. m., GEORGE TELFAIR, infant son of J. F. and Belinda Beattie Bruce, aged 7 months and 20 days.

Our little cherub's gone, wrenches from us in an hour,
Ere the bud its verdure shed to consummate the flower;
Gone where spirit-flowers bloom, from flesh and blood to rest;
No more our darling baby-boy by us will be caressed.
He's now amid the little gems to whom their God said come,
To deck the diadem of love in His immortal home.

INGRAHAM—WM. A., only son of Z. C. and S. A. Ingraham, aged 26 years.

Funeral on Thursday, 10th, at 4 p. m., from family residence, No. 2815 Walnut street. Friends are invited to attend.

MONEY.

Wall Street Gossip.

NEW YORK, August 10, 11 A. M.—Stocks opened strong at advance of ⅛@1¼ from closing quotations of yesterday, latter Richmond and West Point. In early trade, after fractional decline, Richmond and Danville sold up 1¾ and general list a fraction. There was then a decline of ¼@1¾, in which Burlington and Quincy, Lake Shore and Lackawanna were most prominent. At 11 o'clock prices recovered ⅛@½. Wheat a trifle better; very quiet.

Leaf Tobacco.

Only a small break (16 hhds) at one warehouse, consisting of common Burley lugs and leaf, and as the attendance of buyers was small and only a few local manufacturers at the breaks the bidding was lifeless and the market at a standstill—not a hogshead sold, and the bids were far from the real value of the tobacco on sale. Rejected bids on 16 hhds —2 at $4 80; 6 at $5@5 30; 4 at $7@7 90; 2 at $8; 1 at $9 50, and 1 at $10 50.

CATTLE—Buyers were again on hand and again had large orders to fill. The trains were a little late in coming in; consequently buyers did not have much to choose from until late in the morning. Total supply up to the hour of 11 a. m. amounted to 125 car loads, the bulk of common to good grass Texans, the balance divided up between grass Texans and southwest. All classes of buyers made fair purchases and in round lots, and paid very strong prices, as will be seen by glancing at the sales given below. There were no really choice grass Texans offered; therefore no big prices are shown in the transfers. Eastern and interior shippers were the leading operators, although local speculators and the canners also made fair purchases. Grass native steers in moderate supply and sold at prices ranging from $4@6 ℔ 100 lbs, according to quality. Prime and fancy native steers are scarce and wanted. Butcher cows and scalawags sold well enough.

HOGS—With limited receipts sellers again could dictate terms to local butchers. These buyers wanted some heavy bunches, consequently had to pay slight advances over the prices prevailing yesterday. This was wholly applicable to heavy grades. Pigs and light to good Yorkers were dull. Butcher hogs brought from $8@8 75, while Yorkers are nominal at $7 60@7 90; pigs and light Yorkers $7 15@7 50; skips and culls $6@7. Chicago is dull and lower. There is no great demand for hogs. The $8 75 bunch were closely sorted.

FRESH AIR!

The Bellefountaine Horse Railroad runs exclusively summer cars, and at a space of three minutes. A ten-cent ride for a round trip to the Water Tower and return is as great a luxury during warm weather as a three-dollar investment in the "purchase" of a carriage or buggy-ride. Fresh air gives strength and vigor, and provides against sickness, doctor bills and drug bills. Children sleep without kicking or tumbling after an hour's ride upon these open cars. The same effects are experienced by adults in proportion to increase of size.

THE GOLDEN EAGLE.

BULLDOZER BILL.

The Way the Republican Has of Silencing a Libel Suit.

There was somewhat of a scene yesterday afternoon in the inner sanctum of the Knapps at the Republican office. Henry Boemler, an attorney, who recently brought a libel suit against that paper for a restaurant-keeper, took exception to some local reference to his name and fame inspired by the aforesaid hostile litigation, and called upon the Knapps to request them to desist from such course of retaliation. His reception was warmer than he anticipated. Col. Bill Hyde had just returned from a trip around the corner, holding a small stick in his hand, and he was full of politics and fight. Boemler is a diminutive barrister, his fighting weight in proportion to Col. Bill standing 126 to 252. Col. Bill raved at the diminutive attorney and threatened to knock him off the face of the earth with his stick. Boemler stood his ground, asserting that his client had a good case for libel and that he had acted in all sincerity as a professional man in the matter. He proposed not to budge an inch. Col. Bill then resorted to threats, and said that if the suit was not dismissed a special man should be employed to investigate the obnoxious attorney and rip him up the back. Boemler offered him assistance to that end and left the office promising that the Knapps and Col. Bill should hear from him again shortly.

DOME DECKED.

The New Steamers of the New England Quick Transit Co.

Vessels Which Will Run Like Express Trains.

Mr. J. S. Eldridge, superintendent of the New England Quick Transit Steamship Company, of Boston, is in the city, the guest of Mr. E. E. Rice, of the Pickwick. Both of the gentlemen arrived from New York Saturday evening, and were met to-day by a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH, when Mr. Eldridge was interrogated regarding the intentions of his company, which was recently organized for the purpose of putting on a new line of fast boats between this country and England.

"Our company," said Mr. Eldridge, "is made up of Boston men, with Mr. Waldo Adams, who is at the head of the Adams Express Company, as president. Our capital is $5,000,000, and our object is to start a new line of ocean steamers between Boston and Liverpool that will make the passage in about one hundred hours. Towards this end there is now in course of construction at the yard of James E. Smith, at Nyack on-the-Hudson, and nearly completed, a beautiful propeller steamer, presenting many novel features that are expected to effect a very decided improvement in ocean travel. She is called the Meteor, and is the result of the application of thorough scientific principles, the problem being simply the forming of a perfectly safe vessel of such a model as to gain the greatest possible speed by the use of the greatest possible power. She is so nearly finished that she will be launched about the last of the month. This boat can only be considered as an experiment, to show the success of the peculiarities of design, as she will be withdrawn after a trial trip to give place to eight steamers to be built on the same plan.

"Wherein is the difference in this plan from that of other ocean steamers?"

"There's a difference in almost every way. In the first place, the lines are as keen and delicate as those of any yacht. Then the deck is dome-shaped, with all masts and attachments except the smokestacks and pilot-house removed. Taking the Meteor as a model, she is of razor-like sharpness, so that, standing at her bow and looking along her keel, you can see the blades of her wheel at the stern. The shape of the hull is like a V, reducing the resistance of the water to a minimum, while so straight and true are her lines that there is hardly a chance for the raising of a ripple, from the point where her bow enters the water to where her clean, easy run delivers it at her screw."

"What is the advantage of the dome deck?"

"In adding to the strength and reducing the resistance of the wind. Now, you must not let your imagination fancy that deck to be anything like the peaked roof of a house. On the contrary, there is a long deck for promenading, free from all obstructions except the stacks and house I spoke of before, and guarded by a life-rail from stem to stern. From the water-way, or line of the ordinary main deck, the sides begin to round in, thus forming the dome, and raising the promenade deck so high above the water that amidships it could hardly be reached by a sea in the roughest of weather. The combined curve of these lines is so striking and handsome that one at first sight gives no thought to the great gain of strength and safety. But a short inspection proves that if a boat so built was of one solid block she could hardly be stronger. Besides the strength gained from containing the frames around to form the dome-deck, there are longitudinal frames, also essential features of the design, running the entire length, and knitting everything firmly together."

"What are the dimensions of the Meteor?"

"Well, her keel, that was laid last March, is of oak, 12 by 15 inches, and 124 feet long. On the water line she is 136 feet 6 inches, and 153 feet over all. Her extreme beam is 22 feet, and her beam at the water-line, with machinery and 150 tons of coal on board, is seventeen feet. From the broadest part the boat curves in to the crown of the deck, which is eighteen feet wide. Her depth of hold is sixteen feet six inches. Her keelsons are of oak, fifteen inches thick and seven feet high in the wake of the boiler and machinery, tapering fore and aft. Forward for twelve feet abaft the stern the boat is solid, while aft the dead-wood extends forward of the stern-post twenty-four feet six inches. The frames are of white oak, six by eight inches, with six-inch siding. The frames, of course, continue all around and form the frame-work of the dome. The outside plank is of oak and yellow pine 13½ inches thick. The ceiling is three-inch yellow pine, with clamps of four-inch oak down to the turn of the bilge. There are three bilge strokers on each side, four by four inches, and bolted through with galvanized iron bolts, the whole fastening of the vessel being of the same material, with locust tree nails. The lower deck frame is of yellow pine, kneed with hackmatack, with the deck flooring yellow pine. The upper deck, or crown of the dome, is of Michigan white pine, 4 inches wide and 3 inches thick. All of the combinings are of mahogany. The propelling power will be a double compound engine, made expressly by Reed at Brooklyn. It is also peculiar in its make. It has two high pressure cylinders of phosphor bronze, 12 inches in diameter, with 24-inch stroke, and two low-pressure cylinders 24x24 inches. There are four quarter cranks on the shaft, rendering it impossible for the engine to stop on a center. The curious part of the engine is that the two high pressure cylinders are placed inside of the low pressure ones to prevent condensation. It takes steam in the high pressure at 550 degrees, and exhausts it 250 degrees, then exhausting into the lower cylinder at 40 degrees. There is a Lighthall condenser, weighing eight tons. The shaft is of steel, 54 feet long and 7⅛ inches in diameter. The propeller is a four-bladed one, ten feet in diameter and ten feet six inches pitch. This is also made a phosphor bronze. The outer stern-posts are of the same material, with clamps going the whole length of the dead-wood, bolted through and through. The cut-water is of bronze, run down to knife-blade sharpness. The rudder and rudder posts are also of the same metal, the rudder fined like a knife blade forward and aft, and swelling in the center to two and one-half inches. At the outer edge it is but one-fourth of an inch. The engine will be supplied with steam from four boilers in one that are being made by Ward, of Charleston, West Virginia. This is on the water-tube principle, the whole outer shell being a combustion chamber. It has ninety feet of grate surface, 3,560 feet of heating surface, and 7,850 feet of tubing. There are two smoke-stacks three feet in diameter and twenty feet above the deck. The draft of the Meteor will be eleven feet aft and seven feet forward. Of the inner division of space, there is a large main saloon aft, with a row of berths on either side, together with two small and four large state-rooms. Amidships is the engine and boiler room, and forward of this the pantry and cook room, fine officers' saloon with berths and two large state-rooms adjoining, and forecastle in the extreme bow."

"When will the eight new steamers be built?"

"Work will be commenced on them just as soon as the Meteor has made her trip. They will be built by the National Steamship Construction Company at Bay Ridge, Long Island. That company has just secured twenty-six acres of water front just below the railway dock there, and will have the boats completed for the opening of the line next season."

Mr. Eldridge is stopping at the Hotel Barnum, but will go to Chicago this evening to confer with the lake transportation companies on the feasibility of introducing the dome-deckers on their lines.

An extra game has been arranged between the St. Louis and Cincinnati clubs for Sunday next. The Athletics' next Sunday game will be on August 20.

Partial arrangements were made in New York yesterday for a fight between "Tug" Wilson and Jimmy Elliott for $2,500 a side and the championship of the world.

Yesterday Mitchell, the left-handed twirler of the old Cincinnati Reds, was sent for by the Brown Stocking management and will probably stand in front of the bat to-day. In case he does not arrive McGinnis will act.

Pat McHugh, of Stevens' Point, Wis., and W. C. Lawler, of Michigan, will spar for a purse of $50 in the former place on Saturday night. McHugh agrees to knock Lawler out in four rounds of three minutes each, with soft gloves. Bets are being made that McHugh will break Lawler's neck.

Will. Woerhide, of Fourteenth and O'Fallon streets, says that he did wrestle a match with Chris. Jost, the butcher, back of the Fair Grounds on Monday morning, and that he knocked him out of time and won his money. Woerhide further states that Jost's card, published yesterday, was a base fabrication, and that the writer so acknowledged last night. He says he will wrestle Butcher Jost whenever he wants to try it again.

THE great value of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all diseases of women is demonstrated by every day experience. The writer of this had occasion to step into the principal pharmacy of a city of 140,000 inhabitants, and, on inquiry as to which is the most popular proprietary medicine of the time, was answered that Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound occupies a most conspicuous place in the front rank of all remedies of this class. —[Journal.

FINE DRESS PANTALOONS at the GOLDEN EAGLE.

A Bogus Outrage.

The outrage reported from 27 Bates street in this morning's Republican, rivalling in atrocity and pure deviltshness the Bond case at Taylorville, Illinois, turns out to be a plain case of petty larceny. The beautiful victim was found in a drowsy state consequent upon an attempt to solace herself with beer, and was much surprised when told of the dreadful tragedy which had occurred to her. She proposes suing the Republican for damages for the libel upon her character contained in heartless hoax. The foundation for the sensational publication was this: Several days ago a party of men called at Mrs. Howard's house, 27 Bates street, and indulged in a carouse, after which they departed carrying off what portable property they were sober enough to appraise. Thus do great oaks from little acorns grow.

Study the People

During our entire business career we have made it a point to study the people and their interests. Merchants who rely upon the absence of technical knowledge on the part of their patrons to help them out in schemes of deception and trickery never succeed in the long run. It is fair and honorable dealing, reasonable prices and polite attention that make the popular dealer. Just now we ask attention to a large and attractive stock of Men's and Youths' Light Weight Woolen Pants on which we have made specially low figures to close out. They are well worthy of inspection.
